Bibliography

The following list does not claim to be exhaustive either of Laski's writings or of works dealing with his contributions or the themes with which he was concerned. I have included only those books and articles which I have read myself for the purpose of this thesis. Section A, "Laski's writings", includes published books, pamphlets and periodical articles which I have referred and cited in this work and in the footnotes to this work. A much more comprehensive list of his contributions to periodicals can be obtained from the volumes of the Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature and the International Index to Periodicals for the years from 1910 to 1960. In section B, I have cited a number of those works which Laski edited, translated, or for which he wrote introductions, and which I have gone through. Section C contains a number of books and articles in which Laski and his works are discussed extensively. This list is also far from complete since it contains only those items which I have made use of. Section D includes other books and articles to which I have made references in this work.

A. Laski's Writings

"American Political Scene", The Nation, CLXIII (Nov. 23, 1946), 600-601.
"American political System", Harper (June, 1928).

"America Good and Bad", The Nation, CLXIX (July 2, 1949), 8-10.

"An Age of Transition", Political Quarterly, XIV (April-June, 1943), 164-72.

"British Labour Faces Work", The Nation, (June 16, 1924).

"British General Strike", The Nation, (June 16, 1926).

"Capitalism and War", New Statesman and Nation, (March 2, 1936).

"Critics of Stalin", The New Statesman and Nation, (Sept. 14, 1940), 263.

"The Economic Foundations of Fascism", The New Statesman and Nation, XXV (March 27, 1943), 212.

"Fabian Way", Current History, (October, 1934), 33-38.

"Freedom in Danger", Yale Review, (March, 1934).

I Speak to You as a Socialist. Alabaster, Passmore and Sons, Ltd., n.d. (1941.).

"IS Europe Done For?", The Nation, CLXV (Nov. 22, 1947), 548-50.

"A Key to Communism", The New Statesman and Nation, X (July 20, 1935).

"Liberty of the Subject", The New Statesman and Nation, (Nov. 15, 1941).

"Lenin and Mussolini", Foreign Affairs, II (Sept., 1923), 43-54.

"Marxism after Fifty Years", Current History, XXXVII (March, 1933), 691-96.

"The Need for a European Revolution", in Programme for Victory. London; The Fabian Society and George Routledge and Sons, Ltd, 1941.

"On Being Suddenly Infamous", The New Statesman and Nation, (July 14, 1945).

"Position and prospects of Communism", Foreign Affairs, (October, 1932).

"A Philosophy Embattled", The Dial, LXII (Feb. 8, 1917), 96-98.

"Plan or Perish", The Nation, CLXI (Dec. 15, 1945) 650-52.

"Russia and Labour Unity", The Nation, (September 13, 1943).

"Russia and Labour Unity", The Nation (Sept. 18, 1943), 315-18.

"Why I am a Marxist", The Nation, (June 14, 1939).

"Where Do We go from Here?" Review, The Labour Monthly, (Dec. 1940).

B. Laski As Editor, Translator, OR Introduction Writer.

C. Books and Articles About Laski.

Elliott, W.Y. "Pragmatic politics of Mr. H.J.Laski", American Political Science Review, XVIII (May,1924) 251-75.

D. Other Reference Books and Articles.

Coker, Francis W. Recent Political Thought, New York, 1934.
Gierke, Otto von. Political Theories of the Middle Age, Translated by F.W. Maitland, Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 1900.
Gettell, R.G. History of Political Thought, New York, 1924.
Lippmann, W. Public Opinion, New York, 1922.

