ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

In the pursuance of this research work, I have benefited from many teachers, friends as well as family members to whom I am highly indebted.

First of all I wish to thank the Department of Political Science for motivating me to pursue a Ph.D. degree. However, motivation by itself, without proper guidance cannot help one proceed with any endeavour. I therefore, take pleasure in acknowledging the debt I owe my guide Prof. H.C. Shukul, for not only accepting me as a student but for his constant support and encouragement. He patiently went through my drafts and his feedback and efforts has seen the fruition of this enormous task. It was he, as a teacher who introduced me to the fascinating field of International Relations and motivated me to undertake this task. His knowledge of the subject matter and reasoned arguments has enriched me academically and provided me with the confidence to undertake this study.

I express my gratitude to Prof. Anand P. Mavalankar, Head, Department of Political Science for encouraging me to pursue my Ph.D. degree at Baroda. I also thank him for providing me the opportunity to teach at the Department and enriching my knowledge and experience.

I also owe my gratitude to Late Prof. N. Anadkat, who always had a good word of encouragement, and for providing the institutional support.

The Department has provided a congenial and stimulating intellectual environment, and it is because of the presence of excellent faculty who have generously shared their expertise, that motivated me to pursue my further studies at Baroda. In this regard Prof. P.M. Patel has been an important person. It was he who introduced me to the field of empirical research, which has enriched my knowledge and qualifications. His constant support and encouragement has pushed me to work hard toward the achievement of this goal.

I also thank Mr. S. Patnaik for introducing me to the field of security studies and for his constant support and help. His knowledge of the subject and clarity has helped me solve the various difficulties faced in understanding the complex literature of the subject.
I am also grateful to Dr. Amit Dholakia, Dr. Lajwanti Chatani and Dr. Thomas George for their encouragement and moral support.

I take this opportunity to thank Prof. R.J. Shah, Dean, Faculty of Arts for constantly pushing me to complete the task within the time frame. I also thank all the staff of the faculty for their help.

I thank the Maharaja Sayajirao University for providing me with the fellowship and thus assisting me financially.

Mr. Iftikar Ahmed Khan, has been very kind enough to spare his time to go through the manuscript and improving its presentation and readability, while also providing valuable guidance and comments. I also thank Mr. Padmanaban for reading the manuscript and making its presentable.

The long period of stay at the campus has bestowed me with many friends and well wishers, hence it is not possible to record my indebtedness to them individually. I thank all my friends in the department, hostel and at Silvassa. In this regard, Hrudanand Mishra and Rajesh, S.V. need special mention for their painstaking efforts in enabling me complete this task in time.

I am lost of words to express my regards and gratitude to my wife Rupal, my daughter Thea, my parents, and all my family members for their persistent support and help. They have, since long, been patiently waiting for the accomplishment of this task.

Finally I thank God for showering his blessings on me.
