ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

In preparing this thesis, I have received guidance and assistance from a number of people both from the academic and non-academic fields. It is difficult to enumerate all who at one time or another helped me.

First of all, I am deeply indebted to Dr. V. Mathew Kurian, under whose supervision and guidance I completed this study. I am equally indebted to Dr. P.M. Thomas, Professor, Department of Economics, C.M.S. College, Kottayam for all the invaluable services he has rendered to me at all stages of the preparation of this thesis. It is only due to his patient supervision that I was able to complete it. I am grateful to all the teachers in the Department of Economics, C.M.S College, Kottayam, Baselius College, Kottayam and Government College, Kottayam, for the sincere co-operation and constant encouragement given by them for the fulfillment of this study.

I wish to acknowledge my grateful thanks to the staff of the Rubber Board, Kottayam and the Rubber Research Institute of India (RRII), Puthuppally, who were helpful in providing the necessary data and information on the related topic. I am extremely grateful to Mr. R.G.Unni (Retd. Joint Director, Statistics and Planning Department, Rubber Board) and Mr. C.M. George (Technical Consultant, Harrisons Malayalam Ltd., Cochin) who gave me the right direction and advice at various stages of the present study.

I take this opportunity to express my deep gratitude to the Development and Field Officers of the Rubber Board Regional Offices at Pala, Kanjirappally, Pathanamthitta, Nedumangadu, Kozhikode and Sreekandapuram for the invaluable services rendered to me during the period of my field investigation. A large number of estate holders and small growers also gave me all sorts of help during my field survey. It is only due to their help that this work has come to this form. I extend my thanks to all of them.
The secondary data collection was mainly undertaken in a number of libraries including those of the Rubber Research Institute of India (RRII), Puthuppally, Kottayam, Centre for Development Studies (CDS), Thiruvananthapuram, Kerala University, Thiruvananthapuram, Cochin University, Cochin, M G University, Kottayam, Public Library, Kottayam and the Madras Institute of Development Studies (MIDS), Madras. I am very much thankful to the librarians of all these libraries for helping me during my reference work there.

Further, I am grateful to all my friends for their wholehearted support given to me throughout this study.

Finally, I wish to express my sincere gratitude to Miss. Sonia Jacob, Miss. Susan Alias and other staff of the Visual Soft Computers, Kottayam for the neat execution of the typing work in a limited time.

T.V.USHADEVI