ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is pleasure for me to thank all those who have helped me in several ways during my involvement in this research work.

First of all I express my heartiest gratitude to my supervisor Dr. Rashiqa Riaz, Reader, Department of English, D.C.S.K. Postgraduate College, Mau, who has been very helpful during the supervision of this work. Despite her busy schedule she has generously given me sufficient time for the discussions from the inception to the completion of the work. This work could not have been possible without his patient and sustained supervision.

Next, I express heartiest gratitude to Dr. A.K. Mishra, Reader, Department of English D.C.S.K. Postgraduate College, Mau, for having initiate me to pursue the doctoral work on contemporary Indian English Novels.

I am directly indebted for this work to Dr. Manoj Kumar, Reader & Head, Department of English D.C.S.K. Postgraduate College, Mau, for his valuable suggestions and co-operation.
I would like to express my profoundest gratitude to my parents for encouraging me to take up the work seriously. They have always been an ever-flowing source of inspiration, patience and encouragement to me.

I am thankful to the librarians of Central Library, B.H.U. National Library Kolkata and British Council Library, New Delhi for the books they lent to me generously. I also take the opportunity of acknowledging my debt of gratitude to those writers and critics of African Literature whose works I have consulted and also used in my thesis.

Finally, I am grateful to Mr. Raj Kumar Singh, Azamgarh for his prompt and impeccable typing of the thesis.

Shubhendu Kunwar Singh