Acknowledgement

"Leprosy", being the most stigmatised disease, have not been the major thrust of research among the medical geographer's. Being an untrodden field of study, I took this challenging topic for my thesis work on the inspiration given by Dr (Mrs) Jaysree De, Reader, Dept of Geography, Faculty of Science, M.S. University of Baroda

She had been a dynamic source of encouragement throughout my research period and made it possible to do a systematic work on this disease (Leprosy) in the field of medical geography. I pay my sincere regards and extend the highest sense of gratitude to her for the pain she has taken and showed me the right direction in this research work though she for some time, did not maintain a good health

I am highly thankful to Dr O.P. Tewari, District Leprosy Officer, Vadodara, and his entire medical and para-medical staff, as their assistance enabled me to bring this work to completion. He along with his team had not only given technical guidance but also helped me during the survey and the field work. A part from this, I owe much to Dr R. Ganapatii, Director of Bombay leprosy project, Bombay and Dr A.M. Kurup, former Director of Centre for Social Science Research on Leprosy (CSSRL), Wardha, for not only sending me enormous literature and books on leprosy free of cost.
but for clarifying my doubts and confusion that I had about this disease

I am very thankful to Mr K. Murlidharan, Lecturer, Dept of Statistic, Faculty of Science, M S, University of Baroda, who had helped me a lot in the statistical analysis for obtaining concrete results from the given data

I express my sincere thanks to Dr A. Narain, Head, Marine and Water Resource Division (MWRD) and Dr T.S. Singh, Scientist (MWRD), at Space Application Centre (SAC), Ahemedabad, for providing Remote Sensing Application facilities and also for valuable discussions and suggestions related to this work

I am very grateful to Head of the Dept. of Geography and entire teaching and non-teaching staff for the facilities and cooperation they provided during the course of my research work. I am very much thankful to Shri J.N. Sinnarkar and Shri Sanjay Patel (Draughtsmen of Geography Dept) for organising and preparation of maps and graphs

Finally, I am indebted to my mother Mrs Mithlesh Sinha and my sister Mrs Vandana Shrivastava for their constant inspiration and full cooperation till the final stage of this thesis, in addition to their own domestic and official responsibilities

Baroda

Harshit Sinha