ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

It gives me great pleasure to place on record my sincere thanks and gratitude to several persons who have helped me in my research and writing the thesis.

I am grateful to my supervisor Professor Meenakshi Rajeev, Head, Centre for Economic Studies and Policy, Institute for Social and Economic Change, Bangalore, without her guidance and cooperation, the thesis would not have been possible. Her encouragement and enriching ideas on the subject made this work more valuable. I owe her to a great deal for the support in professional as well as the personal aspect of my life.

Many thanks are due to Professor RS Deshpande, Director, Institute for Social and Economic Change, for giving me an opportunity to carry out my research work at the institute. I am also thankful to the faculty, student community and administrative staff for their abundant support during the entire period of my stay at ISEC.

It was a privilege to have had Prof. Shashank Bhide, Prof BP Vani, Prof Venkatachalam, Dr. Suresh Babu as my panel members in my seminars at the institute. Their constant criticisms, comments and suggestions were extremely helpful. I thank Prof. M.R. Narayana for his suggestions and comments on the topic.

I am thankful to Dr. Shashidhar, Registrar, and others from the accounts and administrative sections for their help. I am thankful to the Ph.D program coordinators (ISEC) at different points of time.

I sincerely thank Mr. K. S. Narayana Assistant Registrar, Mr. Krishna Chandran and Satish Kamat of Computer Section, and the Library staff of the Institute for their kind support and cooperation extended to me. I like to specially thank Mr. K. S. Narayana and Prof A Ramachandran for editing the text.

I thank many of my faculty colleagues from IBS Bangalore for their support and encouragement.

I thank many of my student friends from ISEC for their motivation and support.

I thank my parents, sister and brother for their support, constant encouragement and motivation to complete the work.
