I often dreaded the thought of my English teachers at school finding errors in grammatical structures in my work. It was at that time one day that I decided never to allow anything like this to cause anxiety in future. Thus, I promised myself that I would try to become a good teacher of English. That was the beginning of a long journey which led me into this pious teaching profession that I used to dream of joining. Another promise I made to myself when I became a teacher was that I would one day, as soon as it be possible, do my PhD in English Language Teaching. Little had I realized that it would come true, and sooner than I had expected!

There are many academicians who have influenced me both as a student of English language and literature as well as a professional, especially with regard to my understanding of the working of the English language Testing. I am thankful to all of them and in particular to my revered teacher Dr D S Mishra, Professor and Head, Department of English, Sardar Patel University, Vallabh Vidyanagar, under whom I have had the privilege of learning.

Dr J H Khan, a friend, philosopher and guide, has always been a teacher whose influence has been the most important in my life as a teacher. This doctoral research work is the result of his constant encouragement and persuasion. I could not have learnt what I did in this regard if Dr J H Khan, my supervisor and guide had not agreed to accept me as a research student. It was due to his advice and constant encouragement that I enrolled with the Central Institute of English and Foreign Languages, Hyderabad to do my PGCTE. I am greatly indebted to him.

I would also like to thank Dr C L Patel, Chairman, Charutar Vidya Mandal; Principal R C Desai, Honorary Secretary, Charutar Vidya Mandal; Principal Dr D A Raval; my senior colleague and Head, Ms Sonal Patel; and colleagues from sister Departments in the institution for their unstinting support and cooperation.
Research is never the product of the contribution of a person but one born out of team effort, for many people contribute to making it worthwhile. I am thankful to all my teachers, friends, and students on the campus who helped directly or indirectly in this research work. It would be ungrateful not to record the valuable inputs from fellow teachers of English in colleges affiliated to various universities across Gujarat. They contributed to this work by sparing their precious time to respond to the Questionnaire-cum-Checklist that forms the heart of this thesis. Many thanks to them indeed!

Mine is a family of teachers. My parents have always been role models for me, especially my father, Principal Dr Dharmendrabhi L Raviya of Shree I J BEd College, Mogari (Dist: Anand, Gujarat). His loving care and help is gratefully acknowledged. I would like to thank all the members of my family, elderly and young, who have been very supportive of the work I have been doing. I would like them to know that their generous support is etched in my heart.

Whatever success I have achieved in life after marriage owes itself to the caring support I have received from my better half, Bindu, who spared time from her life as a teacher and housewife to stand by me with extreme patience in support of my academic work. I want her to know that I value her care and thank her for helping me complete my work uninterruptedly.
