I have great pleasure to express my deep sense of indebtedness and heartfelt gratitude to Professor M.K. Agarwal, M.Sc., Ph.D., Professor of Physics at this University, for his expert and valuable guidance and kind encouragement with keen interest given to me during the course of this research programme sponsored by University Grants Commission, New Delhi, under faculty improvement programme.

I record my wholehearted respects to Professor A.R. Patel for his blessings and fruitful discussion during this work. His worthy suggestions after going through the final manuscript have helped in giving proper shape to the work of this thesis. I am also grateful to Professor M.S. Joshi (Head, Department of Physics) for providing excellent laboratory facilities necessary for this endeavour. My deep sense of thanks are also due to Professor S.M. Patel (Head, USIC) who has inspired me from time to time.

I have to thank with great honour to Professor J. Van Landuyt, from Belgium, whose discussion for the interpretation of some of my transmission electron microscopic observations is proved to be of immense importance.

My sincere thanks are recorded to Dr.T.C. Patel and Shri N.G. Patel for their skillful technical assistance with electron microscopic work. I thank to Dr.P.D.Patel for his valuable and constructive suggestions during my research work.

I am very much grateful to my colleagues Dr. H.B. Patel, Dr. K. Nagi Reddy, Dr. P.A. Wani, Mr.V.R.Patil and Mr. J.D. Singh for their sincere co-operation. I also thank to teacher fellows and research students working in the department, for their direct or indirect contribution.

I thank to M/s. M.D.Bhatt, S.R. Patel, U.R. Rao and other staff members of USIC, Mr. V.G. Shah and Glassblowing section of PRL, Ahmedabad, for their one or other type of technical assistance. The co-operation of the staff of the office and computer section is also thankfully appreciated. Thanks are also due to Mr. Prakash Salvi, who undertook the responsibility of typing the final manuscript.

The author presents his indebtedness to the Principal and Management of Shri Jayendrapuri Arts and Science College, Broach for grant of study leave and for giving all sort of inspiration and encouragement for this work. I thank to my colleagues in the department of Physics and all the members of the staff of ^{Srri} Jayendrapuri Arts and Science College, Broach for their good wishes.

Lastly, but not the least I remember my wife, Savita and sons, Vandesh, Vipul and Himanshu whose co-operation far exceeds what the words of appreciation can express.
