ANALYTICAL CONTENTS

CHAPTER I.
SAVING AND ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT:

Introduction:

Part I.

Processes and Problems of growth - The need for saving effort and the long-term stability of the saving rate.

Saving vs. inducement to invest - Saving vs. functional efficiency - Saving vs. Consumption and economic development - saving, enterpreneurial behaviour and social requirements - Role of savings in economic development.

Part II.

Factors affecting the saving rate - The Absolute, Relative and Permanent Income Hypothesis - Their limitations - Study of saving functions at Macro and Micro levels - Saving behaviour in India -

The institutional framework - Savings and current income - Savings, past income and assets - savings and changes in income - Savings and the distribution of income - Savings and inflation sensitivity - Savings and population pressure.

Savings and State policy - Determination of the optimum rate of saving.

CHAPTER II.

ESTIMATES OF ACTUAL AND POTENTIAL SAVINGS:

Introduction:

Concept of saving - Methods of deriving saving estimates - difficulties of measuring saving - Saving estimates in India.

Limitations of saving estimates - the Government and Corporate sectors - Direct non-monetized investment - Inventory accumulation - Savings of the Unincorporated Enterprises - Farm Investment, Rural Construction and Non-farm Business - Urban Housing.

Potential savings: Concepts of potential and actual surplus - Location, measurement and mobilization of the potential surplus - Mobilization and mobility of savings.

Magnitude of potential surplus - Inessential consumption - Unproductive Investment - Inefficient investment - Unemployed