The best part of this study has been the investigator's interaction with the distinguished ELT experts in Britain. This was made possible by the financial aid from The British Council which enabled him to visit Britain in November 1986, and seek guidance from Michael Swan (Oxford), Leslie Dickinson (Edinburgh), Patricia Ahrens (Edinburgh), Norma Dickinson (Edinburgh), Gaynor Ramsey (London), Tom Hutchinson (Lancaster), Charles Alderson (Lancaster), Edward Woods (Lancaster), Joan Allright (Lancaster), Scott Wrideatt (Lancaster), and Andy Kennedy (Lancaster). Consultations with these experts was indeed an exciting experience. The investigator is grateful to The British Council, and to Dr. Willy Engineer for their help, and feels privileged that the names of some of the best-known British ELT specialists are associated with this modest piece of research.

It was not enough to bring all the new ideas from England. Their implications for the Indian situation had to be worked out. This valuable guidance was provided by Dr. B.A. Shah. He was there to give help at every stage of the study, and yet he left enough space for the investigator to operate on his own.

The main task of evaluating the coursebooks was patiently carried out by Mrs. Rangnayaki, Prof. G.V. Vyawahare, Prof. S. Mohanraj, Amita Mishra, Prof. Raman Bhatt, Jayashree Mohanraj, Dr. Sulabha Natraj, Hector Pinto, and Prof. Rajendra Jadeja. They did not undertake the work of evaluation as a mechanical, 'tick-mark' affair. Each one of them took genuine interest in the coursebooks, and made valuable contribution to this study through discussions and suggestions.

The investigator would also like to express his sense of gratitude to Dr. A.D. Patel, Dr. Jagdish Patel, and Prof. M.D. Patel for their help in arranging the data in tabular form.
