ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Before submitting this work of mine for the award of Ph. D. Degree in Psychology, I have great pleasure at the very outset to acknowledge and express my deep sense of gratitude and appreciation to my first guide Professor A. S. Patel, the former visiting professor of Psychology at the Department of Psychology, Sardar Patel University, Vallabh Vidyanagar, and the retired Dean of the Faculty of Education & Psychology as well as the Head of the Department of Psychology, M. S. University of Baroda, Baroda, who has taken keen interest in my work and devoted his valuable, busy hours in guiding me continuously at all stages of work, beginning from the day of registration and planning the problem and the methodology up to the completion of the work and submission of the thesis. I have no words for expressing my sincere feelings of indebtedness to him for his untiring efforts at all odd hours, especially in helping me in analysing the data very carefully, representing the statistical computations very systematically and writing out as well as shaping the thesis usefully. I must sincerely admit that but for his inspiring zeal and dynamism revealed in the output of the work surpassing even my own input, the work in the present form would not have seen the light of the day of successful completion.
On the day of completion and submission of work, I feel sorry that Professor Patel's name as the symbol of guidance does not appear on the cover-page of the thesis, since after Professor Patel's retirement from honorary services at S. P. University, I was transferred to my next guide Dr. J. C. Parikh, Reader at the Department of Psychology, S. P. University, Vallabh Vidyanagar. Dr. Parikh took up this assignment of research guidance with an equal zeal, genuineness and devotion to work for me and to encourage me all the time in case of difficulties on my way to reach the goal. He has devoted all his spare time in going thoroughly through all the pages of the thesis that was taking the proper shape. I shall ever remember his sincerity and devotion in helping students and researchers, which, as I understand and he gladly and proudly accepts, have been learnt by him from his own teacher and guide Professor Patel. I have been lucky to receive the joint guidance from the both.

Apart from such academic assistance, I must also make mention of other related types of guidance and administrative assistance, for which the name of Dr. Punambhai Patel, my own Principal of Anada Secondary Teachers Training College, Borsad where I have been working at present, stands on the top. Dr. Punambhai Patel has not only encouraged me for the work, but has also given me all conveniences to work. I feel much obliged to him for his wide understanding, generosity as well as his interest in the broader field of education.
At the same time, I extend my heart-felt thanks to the authorities and the students of schools and institutions as well as individuals in varied communities of Gujarat, all of whom have given me their full cooperation in collection of data for this investigation. I must include in this list of persons deserving thanks also my own parents, sisters and family members (who would not like to be mentioned and to whom a word of thanks is not sufficient) who have supported me in all ways including help in computations for analysis.

Last but the never the least acknowledgement of thanks for assistance is extended to Shri Yogesh Dave of Baroda, who has not only typed my thesis with all care and neatness as well as sense of responsibility, but also has contributed maximally to the get-up of the thesis, for he has sat even during long late hours of the night while getting dictation from my first guide Prof. Patel, both working enthusiastically and cooperatively in my interest. In this connection, I must also thank Mrs. Urvi Yogesh Dave and also my research colleague Dr. L. R. Yagnik, both helping me in scoring the data, and also Dr. M. M. Patel, the lecturer, and Dr. Pramodkumar, the Head of the Department of Psychology, S.P. University, Vallabh Vidyanagar, for their general assistance and encouragement. I express my feelings of gratitude to all those nearer and nearer, who have directly or indirectly offered their valuable assistance in this research study.

ANAND

February, 1986

SOHINI A. PATEL