Death in Shakespeare:
A Study in the Context of his Major Works

Thesis
Submitted for the Degree of Doctor of Philosophy
by
Miss A. F. DAVAR

Under the Supervision of
Prof. R. A. DAVE

Sardar Patel University
Vallabhbhidyanagar,
(Dist. Kaira) Gujarat.
1982
In the lodges of the perishable souls
He has his portion. God, who stretch'd apart
Doomsday and death—whose dateless thought must short
All time at once and span the distant goals,
Ssee what his glance is, but for us the rolls
Are shut against the surveying of art.
Something we guess or know, some spirits start
Upwards at once and win their aureoles.

— C. M. Hopkins.