ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First and foremost, Almighty has provided me the best of health and the best conditions conducive to research. I am highly thankful to the Superpower Who enabled me to stay focused on research irrespective of the ups and downs of life.

Next, I’m reminded of my dear father, who passed away about six years back and was concerned about my Phd till he breathed his last. I owe to him not only the successful completion of this piece of writing but whatever little I could achieve so far or shall do in my lifetime. To express his contribution in words shall amount to belittling it.

My next bundle of thanks goes to my supervisor Prof. Rajender Gupta who because of his intelligence, patience and analytical mind always assured me the successful completion of my thesis, when at times I proved to be impatient and apprehensive like other scholars who faced similar circumstances. He didn’t compromise on my dignity as a faculty member and always restored it. Despite his hectic schedule, he could manage to play his role as an efficient supervisor.

Next in the list are the people who always stood by me and supported me in one way or the other be it my academic need or moral. My heartfelt thanks to my respected former Director, Dr. Meenakshi Kilam without whose proactive role in sending me on study leave, I won’t have finished it within this period, given the nature of job of a coordinator. The Director won’t have let me go on leave had she not got a better alternative. I have no words to express my thanks to Dr. Hina, my colleague and friend who took charge of two courses during my absence. Thanks are also due to Dr. Seema Bhasin, Teacher Incharge B.A.-I for sharing burden of my course. These two colleagues never troubled me with any query regarding the course I was running. Dr. Rao always took feedback regarding my progress in research and helped me in clarifying my doubts. My respected colleagues from my parent department, (including the Heads during these years) were equally supportive. Apart from the teachers, the officers and other staff from teaching wing always helped me with my doubts. People from Research and award Wing (Prof. evaluation) happily did their job whenever asked for help.

I was fortunate to have been born and pursuing my Phd in this era of internet revolution when questioning and answering are instant even for people placed far apart. Dr Enda Duncan replied to my discussion "research methodology in political economy of SAARC" on Methodspace - home of the Page | 9
Research Methods community on Nov. 25, 2010. Mario Ruiz from University of Malaya, the chief architect of GDRI model responded to my e mail (on March 9, 2011) instantly and explained and simplified it. It is a different thing that later I found it unsuitable in my case, given certain constraints. Ambassador Sir John W. McDonald (ret), Chairman and CEO, Institute for Multi-Track Diplomacy and to whom the multitrack diplomacy model is creditable replied to my queries regarding the model. All these people have made a difference in my research work.

Apart from browsing the literature available online (including some books with limited preview), printed books and relevant issues of some journals were also required. In this regard, my sincere thanks go to people in JNU Library, RIS Library, ISI Library, NIPFP Library and SAARC Documentation Centre (all based in Delhi) for their support when it was required the most.

My family members were a big support to me. My mother-in-law acted more like a mother to me and made me feel comfortable. I won’t have given quality time to my research had she burdened me with household responsibilities of a joint family. Father-in-law was always worried about the early completion of my research. Sisters also contributed their part with sincerity. My parental family (brothers, bhabhis, mother, sister, jeejaji) was equally supportive.

Last but not the least, one force stayed with me throughout this journey. My better half left no stone unturned in enabling me to successfully complete my research. My son Parishrut who usually complained that I didn’t have time for playing with him might have been ignored by me but still managed. May almighty lend me the strength to spend more time with him and the whole family in the years to come.

Finally, thanks are also due to the graphic designer who (added finishing touches to my thesis and adjusted figures and tables and) always spared time for me and the binders for timely delivery of the copies of thesis to me. The list of acknowledgements shall be incomplete if I fail to mention two friends, Smriti and Rakesh whose going through the draft of my chapters made me make certain important changes.
