ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

As I look back in retrospect acknowledging help of many people in the completion of this thesis, the name of one person uppermost in my mind is that of Dr. A.C. Julka, Professor of Economics (Retd.) of the Deptt. of Economics, Panjab University. I wholeheartedly thank him for initiating me into this research work, and also for imparting necessary insight to handle the essential details. I also thank Prof. P.K. Sharma of the University Institute of Management Studies (UIMS), Panjab University, for helping me to handle the secondary data for the construction of Composite Development Index.

I am no less thankful to my teacher in Statistics Dr. Ravi Kant Mahajan of Correspondence Courses, Panjab University, Chandigarh, for recommending my candidature to Dr. Julka for the pursuit of research work. I drew on his help and guidance very often and the response has always been instantaneous. I also thank Prof. Shavinder Singh of the Correspondence Courses (Public Administration), Panjab University, for his encouragement and moral support. Handling revenue statistics, which are aplenty in my field data, is, by no means, an easy task and this leads me to thank my office/Directorate of Land Records, Himachal Pradesh, where I served for nearly 26 years i.e. from 1972 to 1998 (including two-year stint in the office of Deputy Commission, Kinnaur) wherefrom I imbibed the alphabet of applied statistics.

I also owe deep gratitude to Sh. V.K. Bansal, IAS, Director of Land Records, H.P. and Sh. L. R. Mohil, IAS, Joint Director Land Records,(in 1990-91) who evinced keen personal interest in my research-work and recommended to the Govt. of Himachal Pradesh a study-leave for one year. Sh. O.P. Yadav IAS, the then Financial Commissioner (Revenue) to the Govt. of Himachal Pradesh, kindly sanctioned my study leave at his earliest. I shall always remain beholden to these Samaritan officers.
Some of the other persons from the Deptt. Who actively helped me and deserve special mention are late Sh. A.R. Verma (Supdt. Grade 1) and Sh. P.C. Thakur (Supdt. Grade-I). Sh. P.C. Thakur did me a great favour by sending all the latest necessary data to Ambala Cantt for updating the write-ups, while I lay bed-ridden. I am also thankful to the District Administration, Kinnaur, especially Sh. Deepak Sanan, the then Deputy Commissioner in August 1991, for all the necessary administrative support in the field-work.

The journey of my Ph.D thesis has indeed been long and tedious. Having been enrolled with the Panjab University in April 1989, I conducted field survey in September 1991 and again in September 1992 and completed the tabulation of field data in 1994. Thereafter, due to some unavoidable circumstances, the work had to be abandoned for more than a decade when the decision of Punjab University Senate to grant one golden chance to all the old registrants to submit their theses by 31.12.10 (later extended to 31.12.12) proved a god-send for me. When Dr. Jukka expressed his inability to resume the supervision of the remaining part of my research work, a search had to be made for seeking the help of some alternative guide from outside the Panjab University. It was at this critical juncture that Dr. H.S. Parmar, Prof. of Economics (Retd.) of Himachal Pradesh University readily came forward to see me through the crisis. In fact, the entire credit of bringing this thesis to its present shape goes to none other than Dr. H.S. Parmar who worked painstakingly and chiselled my write-ups to make them worthy of inclusion in a thesis. His place would always remain high in my esteem. If there is any deficiency in the thesis, the fault is entirely mine and nobody else’s. Since, all through I have been in govt. service and therefore certainly lack the acumen of an experienced teacher, the occurrence of some errors and mistakes is understandable which need to be addressed charitably.

I must also bring on record my gratitude towards Dr. Gurmail Singh, the Chairperson (Deptt of Economics) and Dr. B.S. Ghuman, Dean of Studies, Panjab University, who empathized with me and gave all possible encouragement in the pursuit of my study. I am equally thankful to some teachers of the H.P. University, namely, late Dr. L.R. Sharma, my old teacher during M.A. and who later retired as the Chairperson, Deptt. of Economics, H.P. University; and Dr. N.K. Sharda, my steadfast personal friend (formerly the Pro Vice-Chancellor, H.P. University), who always continued to prompt and never let my enthusiasm drop. I am also thankful to Mrs. Santosh Mahajan and Sh. Badri Prasad of the Centre for Indian Development Studies (CIDS), Chandigarh, for taking personal interest in my academic problems.

And, in the end, I also express my gratitude towards my family, especially my wife Madhu Gupta, who has been of tremendous personal support to me. Her experience as a PGT (Economics) with Kendriya Vidyalaya proved of great help at the time of scrutiny and editing of data. I also thank my children Vishor and Vibhuti and their spouses Uma and Upendra for keeping me motivated. My younger brothers Bal Krishan and Anil both never failed to remind me of my academic goal.

Dr. S.P. Saraswat of Agro-Economic-Research-Centre, Himachal Pradesh University, Shimla, helped me in important statistical computations. A line of mention for my grand children too, namely, master Yagyesh, Jayanth and Shubhaankar — darling imps who let me study. And lastly, I am thankful to Mrs. Chanchal Rani who typed my manuscripts diligently. The thesis was embellished and brought into its present shape by Rohit Birla of Mohindra Book Binders Panjab University Campus, Chandigarh.

A list of names of sampled households and villagers appears at the end of this section. I am thankful to all of them for their hospitality and ungrudging co-operation. However, I am especially reminded of S/Sh. Bhag Singh and Hukum Sen Negi of Asrang village; Mr. Amar Singh, Panchayat Secretary of Lippa village; and, Sh. Joginder Singh, Birma Ram and Sh. Sham Singh Rathore (Field Kanungo) of Sangla village, who, besides lending me a helping hand, also made arrangements for my stay in their village. In sum, I owe my profound thanks to all those people who helped me, directly or indirectly, in completing this work.

DATED: DECEMBER 2012

RAM RATTAN