ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Last few years have been a very trying period of my life, both personally and professionally. While I regret the losses, the gains have been immense. All the support and love I have received, has left me humbler and with a greater appreciation of life and its ways.

Today, as I stand on the verge of achieving one of my long standing dreams, I would like to thank all those people, who in their own unique ways, have helped me to come so far and succeed.

First and foremost, I am indebted to my guide Professor Seema Vinayak, whose insightful comments and constructive criticisms at different stages of my research were thought-provoking and helped me focus my ideas. I am grateful to her for holding me to a high research standard and enforcing strict validations for each research result, and thus teaching me how to do research. At a personal level, I am deeply grateful to her for inculcating strength in me and making me believe in myself. I am bestowed to her kindness and care.

I would like to express my gratitude to Professor Meena Sehgal (Head of Psychology Department) for her constant encouragement and practical advice which enriched my life and work further.

I would once again thank my parents for supporting me and loving me through every difficult phase of my work and life. Thanks to my brothers and bhabis for standing by me. Thanks to my didi and jijaji for everything, this thesis would not have been possible without their love, warmth, and for being my backbone throughout my PhD. My loving thanks to all my friends for just being there and making life fun and joy. Last but not the least I owe it to both my nieces and my nephew for keeping for bringing pleasant distractions with their innocence and keeping me sane in this rush hour.
