It gives me a deep sense of satisfaction and almost a sense of pride that I have been able to complete this challenging, extensive and socio-culturally relevant research project. Keeping in mind the present day global trends, this particular effort to study Indian immigrants in Nairobi becomes all the more significant.

This humble endeavour would not have been a success without the readily accessible guidance and constant encouragement of my learned guide Dr. Mrs. Rajesh Gill.

Due to the nature of this project, I had a close and prolonged interaction with the people of Nairobi. They opened their hearts to me and talked to me in an uninhibited manner, on the issues on which people usually like to project their family, relations, culture and society as the perfect one. Their ungrudging co-operation and support has left me enriched, not just as a student of Sociology, but also as a human being.

I am also thankful to my family and friends who have been an infinite source of support and inspiration throughout.
