Acknowledgement

No doubt that PhD thesis involves the efforts, contributions and participations of different individuals, groups and institutions. Although all those who made the completion of this dissertation a reality are too many to mention, there are individuals and institutions that indispensably deserve sincere gratitude. Firstly a great deal of my gratitude goes to my supervisor, Professor V.T. Sebastian. Sebastian, Sir I never forget your intellectual guidance, inspiration and moral encouragement that gave me untiring energy for the success of this thesis. You tirelessly worked with me from its inception to its completion. All along you assisted me intellectually and morally in two capacities – as a Chairperson of the Department of Philosophy and as a supervisor of my dissertation. All the tracks to the completion of this thesis were very smooth for me because of your twofold capacities that were complementary. I thank you very much.

I am extremely grateful to Panjab University, Chandigarh, the Faculty of Arts and the Department of Philosophy for granting me admission to the PhD Program, facilitating and making my stay convenient, and critically reviewing my synopsis and thesis. My special thanks go to the academic and administrative staff, the research scholars and graduate students of the Department of Philosophy, who in one way or another contributed to the success of this thesis. I am indebted to Ms. Emma Sharma, the Department Librarian, for rendering me sincere and tireless assistance in the Library services, to Madan Lal and Sandeep Singh Dhillon (fellow Research Scholar), who kindly and unreservedly made my stay at the university convenient.

I am extremely grateful to the Ethiopian Ministry of Education for granting me scholarship; all the staff of the Ethiopian Embassy (New Delhi); Addis Ababa University, particularly to the Graduate Studies and Research Office, College of Social Sciences and Department of Philosophy for giving me the opportunity of doing PhD and for providing me financial and administrative support for the field research undertaken in the home country. In addition to the financial support for the field research, the Graduate Studies and Research Office of Addis Ababa University has covered my double trip air fare.
I could not conduct the field research if different offices, institutions and personalities in the home country could not offer their unreserved cooperation. I must extend my sincere thanks to the Oromia Bureau of Culture and Tourism (Finfinne) for writing letters of cooperation to the Zonal Bureaus in the selected study sites and for providing me sources of information. Particularly I am indebted to Ato Abera Nefa and Dima Abera for their invaluable advice and help. My thank also goes to the Culture and Tourism Bureaus of Borana (Yaabbello), Guji (Negele), West Showa (Ambo), West Hararghe (Chiroo), Jima (Jima), and East Wallagaa (Lekepmte) Administrative zones.

The largest body of this thesis is extracted from the minds of many informants. I must express my deep appreciation for all of my informants for having reserved this invaluable treasure in their minds. The great library from which we immensely learn about the past and heritage of Oromo is the living mind of our elders and sages. They have enormous contribution for the present intellectuals to construct an intellectual bridge between the past which is primarily non-literal (oral) and the future that would be more of literal (non-oral). Honestly speaking, this thesis would have not come to reality without the wisdom of these elders and personalities.

The informants to whom I owe enormous debt are Doyyo Wuqaa, Borbor Bule, Dura Dulacha, Melise Boru and Jaatani Dida from Borana (Yaabbello); Tooree Guyo and Duube Adulaa, from Guji (Negele); Dagaagaa Cucee, Tamiru Yadeta and Dewo Abettu from West Shawaa (Ambo & Gindeberet); Jemal Adem, Teib Abbafigi and Adulkerim Abbagano from Jimma (Jimma); Dorsis Dhuguma, Amsalu Temesgen and Daadhitu Bayana (woman) from East Wallagaa (Lekepmte); Haji Mormor Abbasena from West Hararghe (Chiroo); Chaalaa Sori from East Showa (Bishoftu) and Engineer Abera Bekele from Finfinne (Addis Ababa). Dear informants, this thesis are the composite body of all those knowledge drawn from your mind. I may not be wrong if I say, your minds are not only books but also libraries of traditional knowledge and values. Thank you so much for preserving and passing down to us all the knowledge and values you had orally received from forefathers and mothers. If you had not sincerely taken care of them they would have been vanished without being known to anyone.

Some of the data that are used in this dissertation were obtained from the literary works of the expatriate and local scholars. It is in the process of undertaking this research that I was able to know how some of the expatriate scholars have devoted almost their scholarly life to the study of the Oromo society, in a very difficult situation. Paying the immense price it incurred they worked to bring out the reality and the truth of Oromo to light. By so doing, they have opened our eyes to the veracity of these people, and hence they deserve many thanks.

The financial support I obtained for my field research was inadequate in relation to the vastness of the selected sites and the time allotted for data collection. To surmount this impediment I requested some institutions that were believed to have the culture of appreciating research. I must thank the Oromo Self Help Organization (OSHO), the only organization that affirmatively responded to my request. I am also grateful to Ato Mulugeta Debebe, the General Manager of the Organization in promptly responding to the request.

The contribution of friends, colleagues and relatives is immense to make this dissertation a success. The colleagues and friends to whom I owe my sincere thanks are Mr. Girma Taye, Dr. Tessema Ta’a, Dr. Bekele Gutema, Dr. Assefa Tolera, Dr. Workineh Kelbessa, Dr. Terefe Degafa, Dr. Merara Gudina, Dr. Tecklehaimanot Gebreselassie, Dr. Yakob Arsano and Mr. Defar Bekele. Beside their moral support and intellectual inspiration, they helped me in either borrowing me books, journals or informed me the sources of data. In particular I am indebted to Dr. Yacob Arsano, Dr. Assefa Tolera, Dr. Bekele Gutema and Mr. Girma Taye also for their administrative support. Thank you very much not only for sharing the pains I experienced in processing my leave of absence but also for your heartedly cooperation in dispelling the pains. Many thanks to Dr. Desta Gelgelo from USA, who morally and financially supported me while writing this dissertation. Indeed I have been enjoying his sincere and brotherly care and support starting from the time when both of us were doing our M. A. at Pune University, India.

I am grateful to Ato Gebeyehu Abelti and Ato Lemi Kebebew for their immense help in the provision of sources of data; Gobena Ejigu, Desalegn Gella, Temesgen Ababu together with their families, who kindly took care of my family, and generously rendered immense help to fill the gap caused by my absence. I thank you all.

I do not really forget my fellow Ethiopian students at Panjab University, without whose enjoyable company I would have a miserable stay and poor performance while doing this PhD. My thank goes in particular to Abayneh Munishe, Abebaw Kassie, Getie Andualem, Getachew Seyoum, Firew Chekol, Letena Ejigu, Nega Berhane, and Tesfatsion Sahlu, I must owe special thanks to Dr. Bogale Teferi, Haileleul Zeleke, Fantahun Woldesenbet and Tesfaye Kassa who were always unreservedly assisted me in taking me out whenever I got baffled with my computer.

Doing PhD abroad is very wearisome for a person like me, who is a husband, a father and a son. It is not the student who toils but also wife, kids and parents share all the pains. In my absence my wife - Tsehay Chaka, my children and my father Dewo Abettu and my mother Nanie Negeri had paid price for this study. It is the price that they all paid that made me to write this thesis. Dear wife, children and parents – if you were not tolerant, patient and farsighted let alone doing PhD I could not even think of it. I owe an enormous debt of gratitude to you all for giving me this opportunity at the cost of your convenience.

Thank you all; I have become what I am because of you all.
