ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

I wish to express my deep sense of gratitude to my esteemed supervisor, Dr. Darshan Singh, Professor and Chairman of Guru Nanak Sikh Studies Department, Panjab University, an outstanding scholar in the realm of Gurbani for his invaluable help, guidance and encouragement. But for his inspiration and constructive criticism it would not have been possible for me to bring this work to fruition. I am immensely impressed by his sublime scholarship and originality of approach to the study of Gurbani.

I have no words to express my profound gratitude to Dr. (Mrs.) Shashi Jain, Deptt. of Economics for her able guidance and sincere help which she rendered even at the cost of her busy schedule. I am also obliged to all the faculty members of Deptt. of Economics for extending help whenever it was sought. I am thankful to the authority of various repositories of books who allowed me to consult the books required by me for my research work.

While writing this thesis, I have been inspired, encouraged and advised not only by friends and relatives, but also by the mute majority of Sangat. It is, however, not possible to catalogue the names, because the list being so large that it would become larger than the content of this thesis.
I am thankful to Ms. Tanuja Bansal for typing the initial drafts and giving final shape to the thesis with remarkable efficiency.

My two children have been constantly encouraging me ever since they came to know my intention to take up this project. Last but not the least, of course is Dr. Dharamjit Singh, my husband for his overall supervision, tactful support and thoughtful analysis. I sincerely and unconditionally apologise for any mistake I have committed unconsciously while quoting or interpreting the holy hymns from Adi Granth.
