REFERENCES

Chicago Tribune column, Perspective: Q&A with Gordon L. Shaw, May 24, 1998

FMRI study relevant to the Mozart effect: brain areas involved in spatial-temporal reasoning. [Neurol Res. 2001] PMID: 11680506

Levarie S.,(1980). Music as a Structural Model, Social and Biological Structures 3

Orange County Register article, Piano, Games May Multiply Math Skills, March 15, 1999

Parade Magazine article, Will Piano Lessons Make My Child Smarter?, June 14, 1998

Pearce, K.A., (1981). Effects of different types of music on physical strength, perceptual and motor skills. 53(2).

Robichanx R. L. R., (2000). The spatial visualization of undergraduates majoring in particular fields of study and the relationship of this ability to individual background characteristics. DAI-A61/01.

Rodgers, L.M., (2000). The effects and perceptions of early musical training on high school students. DAI-A60/12.

Root-Bernstein, R.S., (1987). Harmony and Beauty in Medical Research. Molecular and Cellular Cardiology 19, 1043-1051

203

Sloboda A. (Eds.), Proceedings of the Sixth International Conference on Music Perception and Cognition. Keele, UK: Keele University, Department of Psychology.

Sylvester J. (1864),. Algebraical Researches Containing a Disquisition on Newton's Rule for the Discovery of Imaginary Roots. Philosophical Transactions of the Royal Society of London.

