ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I express my gratitude to Prof. B. S. Ghuman, former Dean Faculty of Arts and Professor of Public Administration Panjab University Chandigarh and more importantly my Supervisor, the person from whom I have learnt about academic research. It is only due to his immense knowledge and professional expertise that encouraged me to start such a challenging study. The quality of my Ph.D. would not have reached the standards, but for his invaluable guidance.

I also wish to express my gratitude to Sh. Sudhir Sharma, Chairman, Department of Public Administration and rest of the faculty members. I must express my gratitude to Dr. Akshat Mehta for the encouragement and support extended by him. And, all those individuals of Public Administration Department who contributed their ideas, time and energy to work towards the aim of my study.

I am deeply indebted to Dr. P.S Rangi, Dr. N.L Agarwal and Dr. Gurmail Singh for their invaluable help, expert guidance and inspiration during the course of the present study. And, all those who have been an integral part of my research work.

I am thankful to all my respondents for their immense co-operation and for providing me with all the relevant information and details without which this study would not have been possible. The acknowledgement would be incomplete, if I don’t mention the worth full guidance and unconditional support and cooperation from Punjab Government, Department of Agriculture and Food and Supplies, Punjab Mandi Board and concerned Market committees in the State of Punjab.

I owe special debt of gratitude to my parents late S. Basant Singh and Smt. Gurnam Kaur; My wife, Jamit Kaur; Amanpreet Singh (son); and Samdisha (daughter) and other family members and my colleagues for their support. If it was not for them, I would not have got an opportunity to work.
