Acknowledgements

No research work is possible single handedly. It needs commitments and contributions from many more. I had the good fortune of having devoted hearts and willing hands in ample measure to help execute the design. Therefore, I cannot be insensitive as not to acknowledge the aid I got, though, time and space may not permit me to include each and every such person here.

First and foremost, I deeply admire my astute guide, a paragon of excellence, Dr. Anuradha Bhandari, Chairperson, Department of Psychology, Panjab University, Chandigarh for her zeal and assiduity, instruction and guidance as also her patience and persuasiveness to reactivate me ultimately to seeing me through this thesis.

I cannot adequately express my gratitude to Dr. V. V. Upmanyu, Professor, Department of Psychology, Panjab University, Chandigarh for sparing his precious time to keenly study this work and give his discriminating views and insightful comments. His fine tuning the work to the extent of crossing the t’s and dotting the i’s has lent it the present substance and shape.

I thank all the other members of the faculty, Department of Psychology, Panjab University, Chandigarh and the staff for providing all the facilities for the completion of this work.

No words can suffice to express my gratitude to Dr. Sheldon Cohen (USA), The Rand Corporation (USA), Dr. Andrew Smith (UK), Dr. Mary Ellen Nivison (Norway), Dr. Osamu Iwata (Japan), Dr. Hamida Begum (Bangladesh) and Dr. Uday Jain (India) who, in response to my request, very generously sent me articles/psychological scales related to my research. I thank numerous other authors and researchers who like the Northern Star keep showing the way to the posterity and on whom I have drawn heavily.

I am indeed indebted to hundreds of my subjects for their valuable cooperation and hospitality on my personal visits even as some only half opened the doors and turned me away. Either way, it was a great learning experience.

My dear friend Sarita Malik deserves very special thanks for not only being of immense help but also for tolerating me and my demanding calls at odd times.
So also to Neeru Katyal who, as ever, comes to my aid and her current contribution is no exception.

I extend my thanks to the Jaiswal couple - Pratibha and Rajinder - for their time and hard work in efficiently completing the typing job. My thanks are due to the staff of the Department of Psychology, Mr. C.M. Behl, Director, Department of Computer Science and Applications, Mr Mahindru, Programmer, library staff, designers, typesetters and binders. I am obliged to Rekha, Kapil, Sanjay, Satish, Deepak, Ajay, Arun and many more who turned up as trouble shooters.

I wish to profusely thank my husband for his solid support and encouragement, even at the cost of personal convenience, enabling me to submit the thesis. The fond memories of the role of my parents-in-law will ever remain etched in my mind. And lastly, this work would not have seen the light of the day had it not been for the unflinching support and incessant motivation of my parents who egged me on. My gratitude to them.

Amarpreet Duggal