Many individuals and institutions helped me during the research, and I deeply appreciate their assistance. I am grateful to Professor S. Gopal and Dr Prem Nath Kirpal, both of whom have conducted India's relations with Unesco, and who alone could give me the first-hand information on the subject.

I shall be failing in my duty if I do not acknowledge the willing cooperation of Indian National Commission for Cooperation with Unesco, Indian National Archives, Nehru Museum and Library, Unesco Centre, Indian Council of World Affairs Library, India International Centre, all at New Delhi and the Unesco Library in Paris. The latter sent to me the photo copies of the material I needed, free of cost. Similarly, Dr A J R Groom, University of Kent at Canterbury, sent me the copies of his writings on Functionalism which have benefited me a great deal in understanding Functionalism. I acknowledge his kindness to me.

I owe lasting gratitude to my guide, Professor Madan Mohan Puri, who told me that Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan was a character in search of an author. He let me see how the individual embodied in his person the very aims and principles of Unesco. I received the indispensable initial spark of encouragement from him.
only. His advice and personal interest in my work has always been a source of great inspiration to me. All this I will always remember.

It would be presumptuous on my part to express my indebtedness to the faculty of the Department of Political Science, Panjab University, for the constant interest in my work. I should also like to thank Professor Dharmendra Goel of Department of Philosophy, Panjab University, who kindly spared time to discuss some of the philosophical themes.

Words cannot describe what I owe to those many friends whose kindness and generosity have overwhelmed me. I would find it hard to thank them individually; but I must mention the names of Sanjay Chaturvedi, Daya Krishan Singh Pathania, Manjit Singh Thakur and Ashok Kumar Khanna -who have all helped me in different ways. I am also thankful to Shri Om Parkash who typed the thesis with much care and at a very short notice.

Above all, I appreciate the patience shown by my parents who showered their blessings and goodness upon me and who have suffered silently in the hope that this essay sees the light of the day. To them I dedicate this present work.
