This investigation, from inception to its present completed form, has been an outcome of a streamlining influence of reinforcement of variegated nature and feedback received directly or indirectly at appropriate intervals of time in proper sequence. Many persons—supervisor, teachers, friends, and professional acquaintances—have been involved in the thinking behind the study. I wish to mention a few such sources of direct aid to which I feel deeply indebted.

At the very outset, I take the opportunity to express my deep gratitude to Professor V.S.D'Souza, Chairman, Department of Sociology, Panjab University, Chandigarh, for his learned and inspiring guidance, helpful criticisms and constant encouragement throughout the progress of this investigation. His continuous pains-taking efforts in providing guidance and supervision, despite his heavy and busy schedules of work, will ever remain unoblivious.

The heavy obligation and gratitude which I owe to Dr.S.D Kapoor, for planning and execution of this work, can hardly be expressed through words. My demands on his time and energy have been excessive. However, his abiding interest in this study and his helpful attitude towards me have been a great source of inspiration to me. I, however, would like to formally thank Dr. Kapoor for all that he has done for me.

I would be failing in my duty if I do not record my gratefulness for the constant encouragement and advice that I have been receiving from time to time from Dr. Sharad Kumar, former Director, National Institute of Health and Family Welfare, New Delhi, Dr. (Mrs.) Kamla Gopal Rao, Professor and Head, Department of Social Sciences, NIHFW, New Delhi, and Dr. T. N. Madan, Member-Secretary, Indian Council of Social Science Research, New Delhi. The permission to undertake this study and the constant guidance obtained from these learned scholars at various critical junctures of this investigation is highly appreciated.

I also express my thanks to Indian Council of Social Science Research, New Delhi, for providing a contingency grant to me without which this study would not have been completed in time.

I am equally thankful to Dr. V. L. Vasudeva, Professor and Head, Department of Preventive and Social Medicine, Government Medical College, Rohtak, and his Colleagues for providing all facilities which were requested from time to time. The untiring efforts made by them for providing facilities in data collection in Non-PHC area is acknowledged with gratitude.
Similarly, thanks are also due to Institute of Research on Medical Statistics, New Delhi, particularly to Dr. A. D. Taskar, Deputy Director, and to Shri Saxena, Senior Research Officer, who provided valuable assistance and guidance in data analysis.

My grateful thanks are also due to all the respondents included in the research sample, who willingly cooperated in providing valuable information that was so vital for this study. Besides, I express my deep appreciation for the pains-taking efforts of Shri N. Balasubramanian who typed the entire thesis with utmost care and efficiency.
Finally, I would be failing in my foremost duty if I do not recount the long patience evinced by my endeared father, Shri A.N. Trakroo, and my beloved wife, Mrs. Raj Trakroo, who have continuously been a great source of inspiration to me. But for their willing cooperation, permission and sharing common responsibilities at home and elsewhere, the study would not have been completed in time.
