In conclusion it may be said that Imagination and Emotional Maturity are two important aspects of teaching personality since they are good indicators of teaching success. So while selecting teachers, besides other things, these two aspects of personality must be borne in mind. So far our selection of teachers has been based purely on academic records, but the personality traits have hardly been taken note of. The present test fulfils that need and places in the hands of the educationists a reliable and valid tool for measuring the desirable personality traits of successful teachers.
