REFERENCES

Ingersoll, C.L. 1882. Purdue University. 7th Ann. Rept. 87.

Kumar, S. 1972. Study of two diallel sets of maize varieties repeated over three locations. Indian Agric. 16: 61-66.

(Zea mays L.). I. F₁ hybrids and their S₁ progeny.
Crop Sci. 9: 124-127.

(Zea mays L.). II. Comparison of selected and unselected populations. Genetics 67: 137-149.

Stuber, C.W., R.H. Moll, and W.D. Hanson. 1966. Genetic variances and interrelationships of six traits in a hybrid population of Zea mays L. Crop Sci.
6: 455-458.

North-Eastern Corn Improvement Conference, New York City, 9-10.

Thomas, D.L., W.D. Hanson, and A.W. Shaw. 1971. Ear height inheritance estimates and linkage bias among

Timothy, D.H. 1963. Genetic diversity, heterosis and use of exotic stocks in maize in Colombia. p 581-591.
In "Statistical Genetics and Plant Breeding" (ed.)
W.D. Hanson and H.F. Robinson. NAS-NRC, 982, Washington.

1970. Performance of corn synthetics after one cycle of recurrent selection. Agricultural Research Review. Arab Republic of Egypt. 48(6), 33-34.
Corn Res. Div. Min. Agric. and Agrarian Reform, Cairo, Egypt.

Tripathi, B.K. 1968. Studies on prolific ear characters in
I.A.R.I., New Delhi.

Troyer, A.F., and A.R. Hallauer. 1968. Analysis of a diallel set of early flint varieties of maize. Crop Sci.
8: 581-584.

variance and epistasis effects for yield and other quantitative characters in three-way cross hybrids
I.A.R.I., New Delhi.

*Wessels, W.H. 1967. Influence of planting time on maize.II.

Wright, S. 1935. The analysis of variance and the correlation between relatives with respect to deviations from optimum. J. Genet. 30: 243-256.

* Original not seen.