ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

First and foremost, I express my sincerest gratitude, deepest appreciation and a special thanks to my supervisor Dr. Archana R. Singh of School of Communication Studies, Panjab University, for her invaluable guidance, support and encouragement for making me accomplish this enormous research task. She ushered me in her garden of vast knowledge of the subject to enlighten me. She had shown me the light at the other end of the tunnel to pave the way for achieving my cherished ambition of becoming a Ph.D. degree holder sooner or later.

Plato, a renowned Greek philosopher once quoted, “Those having torches will pass them on to others”. Dr Archana R. Singh indeed is a wonderful person, an excellent teacher and a best guide who passes on her immense knowledge to her students one and all relentlessly. I have greatly benefitted myself from the intellectual and illuminating knowledge provided by her. To me, she has been and will always be the “pole star” who guides a seafarer in a stormy night. I am really blessed to do my research work under the judicious, systematic and methodological guidance of Dr. Archana R. Singh.

I would like to gratefully acknowledge all the teachers of School of Communication Studies, Panjab University, for providing me invaluable knowledge, intellectual insights and fruitful discussions in diverse areas of communication science and scientific research. During the six month pre-Ph.D. course work, they taught and enriched me with their immeasurable theoretical and practical knowledge and expertise, which in due course of time helped me a lot in conducting my research work and transforming it into a full-fledged Ph.D. thesis. I truly thank them for introducing me to the world of communication research.

Any research venture cannot be completed without the intellectual materials and research data. I thank the libraries of different faculties of Delhi University and their staff members for providing me the books and other literatures for my thesis. I am particularly grateful for the assistances given by the Parliament Library, New Delhi and Nehru Memorial Museum and Library, New Delhi by providing me the requisite data.
sample (newspaper issues). I also thank the Registrar of Newspapers for India, New Delhi and Indian Newspaper Society, Delhi for providing me the statistical data about newspapers and other relevant information needed for my study.

I would like to express my special thanks and deepest appreciation to Mr. SNV Sudhir, Chief Reporter, Deccan Chronicle, Vizag Bureau, Andhra Pradesh for helping me complete my data collection process. Without his generous help in sending me the requisite copies of the Deccan Chronicle newspaper issues (which are available only in Andhra Pradesh and some places of south India) directly from the Deccan Chronicle office, Vizag Bureau, the timely completion of this research work would not have been possible.

I would like to express my eternal gratitude to my father, Shri Asem Biramani Singh and my mother Smt. Asem (O) Angom Kalyani Devi, for their everlasting love and support. My father’s constant inspiration and meticulous guidance and my mother’s prayers and blessings have always been my sources of strength during the entire course of my research work. My parents have always provided me the advice and solutions to any kind of hindrances that I felt during my work. Their emotional and moral support nurtures me, provides stability and instils confidence in me to undergo my full-fledged research work.

I extend my heartfelt thanks to my three little sisters for their keen interest, support and tolerance in the successful completion of this thesis. I also appreciate the warm supports and encouragement received from my mother in law, Smt. Changamayum (O) Memcha Devi, family members, friends and relatives. They have assisted me with their deep understanding and constant encouragement which helped me not to lose track of my research activities and keep a good focus in my work.

I owe my special thanks to my fellow research scholars Mukesh Kumar, Priya Markanda, Siddhartha Negi and Sahil Koul for their moral and intellectual support all throughout my research venture. I appreciate their timely and insightful discussions, comments and suggestions which have been very useful in framing my research work. They have been the backbone of my research work, running around in the University – departments, administration blocks, banks and libraries for my Ph.D related documents and information.

Last but not the least, I would like to show my greatest appreciation to my husband Maheshwor Changamayum for his unconditional love and support in the course of my research work. It is my husband who made me remember how to smile in my peak days of heavy work, high stress and mood swings. All his small gestures, such as his sense of humour, household help, computer-based technical assistance, tolerating and hearing my redundant stories of achievements, pitfalls and concerns related to my research work helped me complete my whole journey of writing my thesis by rejuvenating me once again.

Moreover, I would like to express my deepest love and gratitude to my beloved late grandparents who had showered me their blessings and constant encouragements in all possible forms for my research work during their lifetime. I bow my head and pay my eternal love and deep respect to my late grandparents for their endless blessings.

Once again, I thank all those people who have lent their direct and indirect efforts in helping me in my research work at various points of time. I cannot but pay their valuable debts by these few words, “May the Almighty bless them in all their efforts and success be their outcomes in every spheres of their lives”.
