ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

It is my proud privilege to acknowledge the legion of colleagues, friends and family members who have contributed to this work, by way of advice, criticism, and support. I am honoured to place on record my eternal gratitude to my worthy supervisor, Dr. Pam Rajput, Professor of Political Science and the Founder Director of Centre for Women's Studies and Development, Panjab University, Chandigarh, not only for providing invaluable suggestions and constant encouragement throughout the course of this work, but also for the rigorous standards of intellectual excellence she has imparted, in the field of Women’s Studies, to me right from the day I started working in the Centre for Women’s Studies.

I must, also, express my sincere thanks to the faculty members of the Department of Political Science, Panjab University, for their encouragement and guidance.

I am extremely thankful to professor Aruna Goel, Director, Centre for Women’s Studies and Development, for her encouragement, supportive attitude and adjustment with the demanding task of completing the thesis particularly in the final stages.

I am especially indebted to Dr. Manvinder Kaur, my colleague and a true friend, for providing me constructive and substantial help in several ways during my research. I am also thankful to Mr. Sawarn Singh, Senior Research Analyst in Population Research Centre, for making me familiar with the intricacies of the Computer for data analysis.

I am thankful to the staff of the library of the Vidhan Sabha of the three States under study; A C Joshi Library; Library of the Department of Political Science and Library of Women’s Studies and Development.
Panjab University. My thanks are also due to Mr. Sohal Lal Sharma, Mr. Paramjit Singh and other staff members of the Department of Political Science. My sincere thanks are due to Mr. Diwaker Tripathi, Mr. Anil Dutta, and Pyare Lal, the staff members of the CWSD, Panjab University, for the help and support they gave me in several ways.

My sincere thanks are due to my respondents, women legislators from Himachal Pradesh, Punjab and Haryana for providing me cordial and friendly environment to conduct my research.

My family members have always been a source of sustenance and inspiration for me; needless to say this work owes a lot to them. Particularly to my father late Mr. Gulam Hyder, a veteran Freedom Fighter and my mother Mrs. Sakina Hyder, a social activist, who taught me the meaning of life, father-in-law, Mr. Tera Singh Chan, an eminent Punjabi poet and play writer, and my mother-in-law, Mrs. Basant Kaur, whose blessings and love kept me going in difficult times, I owe a debt beyond repayment.

I must also gratefully acknowledge the encouragement and support of my husband, Mr. Dildar Singh. His enthusiastic involvement in the work went a long way in its successful completion. I owe a special debt to him.

My thanks are due to my brother, Dr. Mujahid Hyder, he always encouraged me to go ahead and complete the work whenever I felt exhausted. Finally, I owe a lot to my daughter Sandi and son Sumail, for their understanding and tolerating the hardships they suffered, as the study took the time which was their rightful due.
