ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The completion of this dissertation is due to the guidance and support of two very wonderful human beings. I express my sincere and deepest heartfelt gratitude and thanks to my supervisor Professor Manju Jaidka whose sagacious, thoughtful, and very human nature provided a supervisory climate in which this work could freely develop. Her help extended well beyond what a supervisor may reasonably be expected to offer. It is a very great privilege to know her. Similarly, I would like to thank my wife Maryam for her unfailing love, steadfast support, and for the breadth and depth of her emotional and intellectual understanding throughout this project.

I also wish to thank the chairperson of English and Cultural Department of Panjab University, who was very supportive and extended all the necessary assistance to me. I am indebted to the library and office Staff of the department for their efficient supports.

My family and friends have been wonderful, as always, but for specific help with this work I would like to thank two people in particular: my dear friend Dr. Nasser Dashtpayma for all his kindness and encouragement and my sister-in-law Simma for her valuable help and support during our stay in India.

I owe a debt of gratitude to my family—my mother, uncle Jaffar, brothers, sisters, and their children—for faith, encouragement and emotional support. The fulfillment of this dissertation is as much their dream as it is mine.

Finally, I wish to thank my daughters Rosa and Melissa for your love and patience during the years that “daddy was writing his book.”
