ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

At the very outset, while paying obeisance at the feet of the Lord, I take this opportunity to thank with gratefulness my supervision, Dr. L.S. Vishwanath who initiated me into the discipline of research. But for his imaginative suggestion, in the first place, I would not have possibly chartered a course of research in the field of social history. In what has now turned out to be a very rewarding exercise on my part, I solemnly acknowledge his initial foresight in introducing me to this much neglected aspect of Orissan history. I am impelled particularly to recollect with indulgence my long sittings with him, discussing the finer points of social dynamics which had an important bearing in building up my thesis. Apart from his critical support at every stage, the willingness shown by him to go out of way to extend all solicitous cooperation towards the concluding phase of my work, when I was feeling pressured from all quarters, also bears heavily on my mind. For all this and more, I again thank him on the final accomplishment of my task.

Secondly, as I cherish the years of my fruitful stay in Pondicherry, I extend my heartfelt thanks to Professor K.S.
Matthew, whose academic stature and reputation had beaconed me to this University. My gratefulness to him is also due to his providing a familial atmosphere in and outside the department which was of seminal importance for carrying out my research. His easy temperament and protective attitude towards the students is a gift that I shall continue to treasure.

In this context I also offer my thanks to all other academic and non-academic staff of the department of History. Their all-round help had foreboded so well in facilitating my work. My thanks are also due to my friends Gaetan Coelho, Sambhu Prasad, Jayshella Stephen, Ashok Panda, Samuel Missal, Parthibo Bose and Tejo Prakash whose company was always invigorating and purposeful in ways more than one.

Thirdly, I wish to thank those academics to whom I owe a good deal for helping me to conceptualising my work. Particularly I thank late Professor Tara Shankar Banerjee of Vishwabharati who had impressed upon me the necessity to look into the 19th century creative literature of Orissa to obtain a copious reflection of the contemporary society in them. I also thank Professor Sunil Kothari with whom I had a chance-encounter during my stay in the Gomati Guest House of Jawaharlal Nehru University in New Delhi. A famed art-critic of our times, Professor Kothari was kind enough to entertain my impromptu request for sharing with me his incisive knowledge on the Orissan culture. Much of his views were high in my mind while I was dilating through the first chapter of my thesis my discussions with Professor Karuna Sagar Behera, ex-head of the Post-Graduate Department of History of Utkal University and Professor K.N. Panikkar from the Center for Historical Studies of Jawaharlal Nehru University, were also of great help to me in comprehending the nuances of pre-colonial and colonial phases of Indian history in socio-historical perspective. My accomplishment in the present work, therefore, is a product as much of my own studies as of my interaction with these scholars of repute.

Fourthly, I extend my thanks to the librarians and other members of the staff of the National Archives and Library, New Delhi; Indian Council of Historical Research, New Delhi; Indian Council of Social Sciences Research, New Delhi; Kendriya Sahitya Academy, New Delhi; National Library, Calcutta; Orissa State Archives and Library, Bhubaneswar; Balasore District Record Room, Balasore; Institute de’ Francoise, Pondicherry and the Pondicherry University Library, for permitting me to consult the necessary source materials in their libraries and also making available their reprographic facilities. In this regard I also thank Mr. Gajendran Behera, who accompanied me in course of my survey work in the district of Balasore.
Not the least responsible in enabling me to complete my work is the Arunachal University where I am presently posted as a lecturer in the Department of History. Of particular importance is the gracious attitude of my Head of the Department, Professor S. Datta, who took in his stride my long absence from the department. My thanks are also due to Mr. Pura Tado, who unreservedly stood guarantee on my study leave. I also place on record my thanks to the Vice-Chancellor, Professor A.C. Bhagavati and the Registrar, Mr. Joram Begi of Arunachal University for sanctioning me the much solicited study leave.

My wife Annice and other members of my family who have always stood by me deserve more than any formal thanks. It is to them that I owe all my successes in life.

Finally, I extend my thanks to Dr. Chakradhar Behera, Lecturer in the Department of Sanskrit of Pondicherry University, for making his personal computer available for my work and for largely taking the responsibility of seeing my thesis through.

At the end I wish to acknowledge the cooperation and help of all those who well deserve my grateful thanks but whom inadvertently I might have forgotten to extend the same.

Date: ____________________________

Pondicherry

(Prayuta Kumar Mandal)