ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

J.M.Clark once said, "Knowledge is the only instrument of production that is not subject to diminishing returns." I have understood the truth of this statement only after a protracted labour with my dissertation. Ever since I completed my M.Phil from Stella Maris College, Chennai, I have had a very strong desire to undertake research work. Several people influenced me in my career as a student. I recall with gratitude my teachers in school and college, for laying a good foundation and for enabling me to further update my knowledge.

In the theatre of Ph.D., the most important persona is not the researcher but his/her Guide. It is the Guide who sustains the scholar's intellectual well-being at every stage of his/her academic journey. I was fortunate in this regard to have such a gentleman scholar in Professor P.Marudanayagam. Working with him was a great pleasure. He gave wings to my fledging ideas.

The vast Pondicherry University campus surroundings and all the staff members of the English Department provided an ambient atmosphere for learning. The interaction in the Research Club forum kindled in me a desire to explore areas that I had hitherto not ventured into.

I thank all the members of Indo American Center for International Studies (formerly ASRC), for enabling me to make use of their vast resources and for also helping me by issuing books on an extended period. Dr. Issac Sequiera, with whom I had stimulating discussions on many occasions, dispelled all my doubts when I initially embarked on this arduous journey. I also extend my thanks to the librarians at SCILET, Madurai, for the help they rendered by way of photocopying material.
My roommate Saumya Vaikary, whom I used to endearingly call Kucchi, added colour to my life during our stay in Cauveri hostel for a year.

I thank my parents for their emotional support. In particular, my mother for dishing out delicacies whenever I went home. My father's pride in calling me Dr. Sowmya was also a source of inspiration whenever I had thoughts of giving up midway. I also appreciate my aunt, Ms. Prema Krishnamurthy, who constantly encouraged me. More than that, I remember those lighter moments she provided, which alleviated my tedium.

I thank my in-laws for being an encouraging force and of course, my husband Mahesh, for his understanding and enthusiastic motivation during those testing times. Had my parents and my husband not had the confidence in me, this work would not have seen the light of day.

Above all, I thank God for giving me

- The strength to self-discipline,
- The mind to imagine,
- The spark to innovate,
- The will to dare,
- The courage to explore,
- The spirit to persevere, and
- The patience to accomplish.

Sowmya 🙏
