ACKNOWLEDGMENT

I would like to express my gratitude to my supervisor, Professor Rana Nayar of the English Department, Panjab University. This project could not have been accomplished had Professor Rana Nayar not introduced me, in the first place, to David Mamet’s world and his dramaturgy. Professor Nayar’s kind, generous and at the same time uncompromisingly analytical critique helped this thesis be completed. He was a source of constant inspiration to me and I would forever be grateful to him for opening the new doors to both the world of knowledge and the knowledge of world.

I would like to express my thanks to the chairperson and also the teachers of the English Department for their very constructive suggestions.

The last but not the least, let me thank my beloved life partner, dear Katayon, whose patience and tolerance gave me encouragement to do this study. In more than one way, I owe it to her.
