Acknowledgments

Many thanks to my supervisor, Dr. Shelley Walia, for his patience, help and advice which clarified my thinking in the rather tortuous method of employing postmodern theories to modern poetry. I would also like to acknowledge the Indian Institute of Advanced Studies, Shimla, the American Center and British Council, both in New Delhi, for the use of their library facilities; the American Studies Research Centre, Hyderabad for facilitating a grant which enabled me to stay at the centre and gather material from their library. The environment at such places, in my opinion, is what is conducive and particularly inspiring for scholarly works. I am also grateful to Rumina for her suggestions for the numerous improvements in the final draft.

My acknowledgment will not be complete unless I express gratitude to my parents and relatives for their constant support and encouragement without which it would not have been possible to see this project to its completion. Finally, a special thanks to my brothers for seeing me through the countless rough spots I encountered with the computer.
