ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The department of History of Pondicherry University has been a blessing for me as my academic career was developed here. The constant supervision and interest shown by Dr. Mahavir Singh my supervisor selected by the Pondicherry University, known as an academician especially in Russian studies and Archival science has been beneficial for me. Working along with him for this topic has been very pleasant as he is very encouraging and allowed me to do an independent research all along. He made all the necessary comments and suggestions in the research work in order to highlight the questions raised in the thesis. His critical view, sparing his valuable time despite his busy schedule as Director, Maulana Abul Kalam Azad Institute of Asian Studies, Kolkata for the corrections; suggestions especially in the final stage of the research work had added depth to the thesis work. This researcher is grateful for the help and cooperation given by the supervisor and his family during the visits to Kolkata for the corrections.

Library staff of the Pondicherry University Central Library has been very cooperative in issuing books for me. Librarians of the French Institute, Tagore Arts College, Romain Rolland, Teen Murti Bhavan Library and Museum, British Council Library New Delhi have been very kind in locating books for me. I am indebted to staff of National Archives of India New Delhi, Archive of Pondicherry and Madras Archives.

This research work started with the award of Savarayalu Nayagar Fellowship by the Government of Pondicherry in 1997, followed by the Nehru Memorial Fellowship in 1998. However this topic for research work was taken into consideration after going through the available materials at the Pondicherry Archives and the researcher had to face problems on the area of comparison. This was because primary materials on Canadian history were not available in Pondicherry. It is in this context that eminent historian and academician, then Professor and Head Dr. K. S. Mathew and Dr. Mahavir Singh recommended my case for award of Shastri Indo Canadian Scholarship. As a result the Shastri Indo Canadian Scholarship 2000-2001 allowed this researcher to go to Canada and collect the materials that was indeed a God sent one. I thank the Shastri Indo Canadian Institute based at New Delhi for making my stay in Canada worth while concerned with material collection. I thank the Director of SICI India Office, and the Programme Officer, other staff, the SICI India Office Librarian Ms. Kanta who personally involved with me by helping me in locating books on Canadian History during the initial period of source collection and made the material collection progress. I thank the SICI Calgary Director and the Programme Officer involved with the work.

I am indebted to the University of Ottawa for enrolling me as a visiting researcher at the Institute of Canadian Studies from March 2001 to October 2001 at the instance of SICI Calgary. The Director Professor Chad Gaffield and Staff of the Institute of Canadian Studies had been kind enough by providing me with an office and computer facility. Their constant encouragement and support gave me the necessary step to proceed with the collection of research materials.

I am grateful to the Library staff of University of Ottawa, the Archive cell of the Library and the Institute of Canadian Studies Library staff for their prompt and timely help. I cannot forget the way in which staff of National Archives of Canada made documents available to me at the shortest time realizing my limited time available for collection of materials.

The first draft and outline of the thesis during my stay with the Ottawa University was critically scrutinized, refined with all the minutest details and aligned by Emeritus Professor Cornelius John Jaenen of Department of History, University of Ottawa who was my academic contact at the affiliated University. Without his critical point of view this work would have been incomplete. I am grateful to Professor Jaenen for his patience and willingness in correcting the draft of the thesis and helping me with my accommodation, office space and providing me with all the details of Canadian Library facilities available. It is a blessing to be associated with such a remarkable academician on New France, ethnic studies, and natives of Canada etc. He has worked and taught in all level of public education in Canada, France, United States and India. His academic publications in the form of articles in all leading journals, booklets and books are many to be individually highlighted. He has got the book prize of the French Colonial Historical Society and the Sainte-Marie Prize in Canadian History. He is the founder of the first Canadian Ethnic Studies Association of which he was the President. I personally thank Dr. Caroline Andrews the Dean of Department of Political Science for the interest she took in my work and the observations she made which helped me to clarify my doubts. My sincere thanks are due to Dr. Stephen Inglis of the National Museum for Science and Technology at Ottawa. His keen interest in taking me around the Museum and showing all the artifacts regarding the first nations was an eye opener for me as it brought me more closely to the subject that I was dealing with.

I thank Professor Pierre Boul, Professor Tet of the Department of Chemical Engineering, his wife Mrs. Sheila Williams for moral support. I am indebted to Dr. Neera Jacobs and Mr. Jacob Pabatty for providing me quilt and cooking wares during my stay in Canada. I cannot forget the ways, in which my friends at the University of Ottawa came forward to help me to pack my papers and books back to India, sort out materials chapter wise for me and help me enjoy a good academic relationship. I am indebted to Miss Veronica Diaz Arce graduate biology student of science at the University of Ottawa for helping me processing data on the computer, providing me with food during the last months of my stay in Canada.
My thanks are due to Mr. Dale Ward of the Canadian National Archives office for his valuable assistance in material collection from the archives. His kind gesture of allowing me to stay with his family and treating me as a part of their family had made me feel at home. I thank his wife Mrs. Natalie Ward for her hospitality and transportation facilities given to me during my stay in Canada.

I thank the Librarian, Dr. K. Nityanandam of Pondicherry Engineering College for helping me with the source collection at NACT and interrelated places. My special thanks to Mr. E. Raju, S. Murthy and Mr. K. Karunakaran of Pondicherry Engineering College for helping me with their valuable assistance in processing the data and especially in drawing tables required for the thesis.

The present Professor and Head of the Department of History Pondicherry University, Dr. L. S. Vishwanath has been very cooperative in forwarding the thesis and arranging for all official assistance and I also thank Dr. Venkata Raghotham for lending me books that was not available in Pondicherry. I sincerely thank Dr. G. Chandrika for her help in locating libraries on sources for the thesis and her critical comments on the thesis work.

This thesis work is dedicated to my parents, sister, brother and my husband, as without their constant guidance and support this work would have been incomplete. I appreciate the patience shown by each family member in this regard and with helping me in collection of papers through Internet, printing and meticulous correction. This thesis work above all is indeed a handiwork of the Lord as this is completed in His name.
