ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I wish to express my gratitude to Dr. A. Mahajan, my supervisor for his constant guidance, active interest and constructive criticisms. Had it not been for his painstaking efforts in guiding me throughout the difficult times, I would not have been able to complete my thesis in time.

I also owe my gratitude to Professor Pritpal Singh, Indian Institute of Technology, New Delhi, Professor V. S. D’Souza and Professor S. L. Sharma for their kind support extended to me whenever it was needed. I am grateful to Mr. K. C. Kaistha, Dr. Dwarka Prasad, and my friend Miss Lhaga for extending their willing help in the statistical analysis of the data.

I am thankful to Mr. P. N. Pimpley, my teacher and Chairman of the Department of Sociology, Panjab University for his invaluable help, encouragement and inspiration.

I am greatly indebted to my friends Loveleen and Romela Jain who agreed to spend a part of their precious time in helping me to make the necessary grammatical corrections in my thesis.

I would also like to sincerely thank Dr. K. L. Sharma who has not only taken the trouble of going through the manuscripts of my thesis, but has also made several valuable suggestions to improve its quality.

I would like to thank Mrs. Pachanda, Warden, Sarojini Hall, who is like a mother to me for her constant support, a number of favours, assistance and moral support throughout my stay in India. I would also make a mention of Mr. B.L. Gupta, Deputy Registrar, Dr. (Mrs.) K.P. Singh, the acting Director of Population Centre, and Dr. (Mrs.) Asha Sethi, Lecturer in the Department of Education for their moral support and constant inspirations.

In this research project I have received invaluable help from my friend Varunee, Pranee, Miree, Bandit, Sumrat, and numerous other Thai friends. I would also like to thank my hostel friends Kamla from Mauritius and Anuradha for their help in completing this thesis. Although it is not possible for me to name all the people to whom I am indebted and owe my gratitude, I would like to thank Mr. Prawspa, and the Indian families of Guptas and Margos who helped me in number of ways.

I would also like to thank all the staff and people in the office of my department and also my typist Mr. Mohinder Pertap for their kind and willing assistance, the I.C.S.S.R., I.I.P.A., Delhi, Indian Institute of Technology, and Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi for their invaluable help. I remain acutely conscious and realise fully that, but for those who have helped me throughout my difficult moments, this task would never have been completed.

Finally I wish to put on record my sincere thanks to all my family members who made it possible for me to work in India and who helped me in a number of ways. I am also very thankful to all the government and private organisations in Thailand who extended full cooperation and provided all the needed informations. I would fail in my duty if I donot acknowledge their cooperation, help and guidance I received from the women executives in Bangkok.

Napari Kraisongwadi

Department of Sociology
Punjab University
Chandigarh, INDIA