Acknowledgements

I owe a great deal of gratitude that can only be expressed in deeds rather than in words to Dr. Pushpinder Syal, my supervisor, for the time, patience and academic interest she has bestowed on my research project, which resulted in this thesis. I am deeply obliged to my supervisor for all that she has done.

Thanks are due for a number of people to whom I am greatly indebted. I express my gratitude to H. E. Mohamed Osman Omer, the Somali Ambassador to India, for his invaluable help to me. H. E. Omer made sure that in every trip of his, to Europe or the United States, he procured for me some source of relevance to my research: Derek Wright’s book on Farah’s novels is among those he generously placed on my table. I am also thankful to Mr. M. A. Tarah, the former First Secretary of the Somali Embassy at New Delhi, for bringing me two novels of the Dictatorship Trilogy. I should also express my gratitude to Mrs. Aisha Haji and Mrs. Ayan A. Egal of the Somali Embassy at New Delhi, for their help and encouragement.

I can hardly express enough my gratitude to my soulmate and secret sharer, Mahbooba A. Hamza, for her personal commitment to give me all the necessary quite family life. My wife always made each and every difficulty or disturbing circumstance that I faced easy and bearable.

I am as well thankful to Mr. Nuruddin Farah, who appreciated my decision to carry out this study and introduced me to his close friend, Prof. Charles Sugnet of University of Minnesota, Minneapolis. I am highly indebted to Prof. Sugnet, who contacted many other scholars so as to help me get some of my work’s primary and most useful secondary sources. I am very much sure that Prof. Sugnet's generosity knew no limit when he decided to send me his own copy of Farah's latest novel: Secrets (1998). In the same breadth, I also express my indebtedness to Prof. Patricia Alden and Prof. Louis Tremaine for their invaluable help of sending me a copy of their priceless recent book on Farah's works: Nuruddin Farah (1999). To Dr. William Riggan, the editor of World Literature Today, I owe great deal of thanks as well, for sending me a supplementary copy of the issue of World Literature Today devoted to Farah and his works, on the occasion of his receiving the 1998 Neustadt International Prize for Literature. My thanks go to Prof. S. N. H. Jaffari of Jamia Milia Islamia as well, for his help and encouragement.

My thanks are also due to all my friends, who have always been a great source of strength to me: Dr. Abdisalam M. Mahmoud, Dr. Hussien M. Nur, Dr. Ahmed A. Ahmed and his wife, Dr. Aisha M. Ahmed, Mr. Sayed Ali M. Ali, Mr. Shaheed H. Saleh, the principle of New Delhi Iraqi School, and his wife, Mrs. Anam Khallaf, Mr. Ahmed Assaf, Mr. Naseeb Khan and Mr. Faysal Abdishakuur. I single out in thanking, my generous friends, the Bohtan Brothers; Mohamed and Abdirazak Ali Hassan for their technical help.
