Acknowledgement

I owe a deep debt of gratitude to my Supervisor, Dr. G.P. Srivastava, Reader in Linguistics and Languages, R.S.U., Raipur, for his unflinching help and guidance in the inception, preparation and execution of this project.

My thanks are due to Dr. R.C. Mehrotra, Professor and Head, Department of Linguistics and Languages, R.S.U., Raipur whose timely encouragement and valuable suggestions quickened the completion of the project.

I wish to express my appreciation and gratitude to my friends in R.S.U. and in Orissa, and the library-staff of R.S.U., for making available to me the necessary books and periodicals, and for helping me in the final preparation of this dissertation.

I must also acknowledge my indebtedness to the many teachers in Orissa who painstakingly completed the long and tedious tests in their schools to procure data for this project.

I can not but express my thanks to the 'little heroes' - the students of these schools - without whom this project could never have been conceived of.

I am also thankful to the Education Department, Govt. of Orissa to have encouraged the completion of this work.
by sanctioning me two years of study-leave, and to many of the members of teaching and library staff, CIEFL, Hyderabad, whose suggestions and co-operation during the initial days, facilitated material-collection for this project.

Finally, it is a pleasure to convey my appreciation to my wife, Chandralekha, who ungrudgingly bore the burden of my parents and children during my absence and looked forward to an early completion of the project; and to my babies, who for no fault of their own, remained all these days, deprived of the love and affection of their father.

Raipur,

D.S. Parida
