ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I was drawn to this subject while doing M.Phil. in the department and collecting material for the dissertation "Gandhi and the Second Round Table Conference 1931", I found that the accounts of the same event vary from author to author, and I started searching for an explanation. It was at this stage that I was made aware of the field called 'Historiography'. I am grateful to Prof. S.L. Malhotra, the then Chairman of the Department for showing me the need for a study of the subject, and also to the UGC for making this research possible by awarding a Junior Research Fellowship to me for five years.

In the initial stages of this work personal guidance and information received from Syts E.M.S. Namboodripad, Hiren Mukerjee, B.R. Nanda, P. Sahay-son-in-law of Dr. Tora Chand, Prof. Sumit Sarkar, Prof. James Hunt and Prof. Judith M. Brown proved immensely useful in clarifying my ideas about the subject. I, indeed, consider myself singularly fortunate to get personal advice and cooperation through correspondence or interviews from such renowned scholars.

To Dr. (Mrs.) Sandhya Chaudhry, I owe a great deal for supervising and guiding this research work, and express my sense of gratitude to her.

I, profoundly, thank the Vice-Chancellor and the Dean University Instruction for the kind consideration shown to me at the last stage i.e. submission of the thesis.

This work has benefited intangibly from discussions with senior scholars from various Indian and foreign universities who I am unable to mention here, by name, for lack of space. I am thankful to Prof. Indu Banga, Dr. (Mrs.) Kiran Pawar, Dr. Rajiv Lochan, Dr. Raja Ram and Mr. N.K. Ojha, scholars of history on the campus for providing valuable insights for the understanding of the subject and suggestions in developing the argument.

To my young colleagues Mrs. Veena Chaturvedi, Ms. Meenakshi Soni, Mr. Amardeep Sandhu, Mr. Subhas Gupta, Mr. Des Raj and Mr. B.B. Talwar, I take this opportunity to express my special thanks for extending much needed help in checking the rough drafts and references etc.

I am happy to acknowledge the kindness shown and much needed facilities extended to me by the staff of this department during the course of my research work.

My family though mentioned in the end, is the real source of my inspiration. My parents inculcated in me the values which the subject of study - Gandhi had advocated - they too were influenced by the events of those days. My sisters, brothers, and their families have boosted my morale and have suffered my fluctuating moods patiently and perseveringly. My friends and their families too have been a consistent source of support.

To the Librarians of National Library, Calcutta; Institute of Historical Studies, Calcutta; ICSSR, Calcutta and Chandigarh; and Netaji Research Institute, Calcutta; Nehru Memorial Museum and Library, New Delhi; and Libraries at Gandhi Smarak Nidhi, New Delhi; Gandhi Peace Foundation, New Delhi; Gandhi Smriti and Darshan Samiti, New Delhi; Dwarka Dass Library, Chandigarh; Indian Institute of Advanced Studies, Simla; Panjab University Library and Department of Gandhian Studies, Panjab University, Chandigarh; I feel deeply indebted for the general help, cooperation and assistance extended to me during my visits to these places.

My thanks are due to all those who have directly or indirectly helped me in these eight years long project. My due thanks to the typists and Computer Operator Mr. Ravi Kumar of Shauul Graphics.

I dedicate this work to the torch-bearers of Truth, Non-violence and self righteousness.
