I place on record my deep sense of gratitude to Dr. H. R. Rajni, Reader in Entomology, Panjab University, Chandigarh, for his valuable guidance, constructive criticism and incessant inspiration under whose supervision this research work has been carried out. It is needless to mention that without his able scrutiny and academic acumen, those investigations could not possibly take the shape of this presentation. A word of special thanks goes out to him for giving me a free access to the material and literature of the US PL 480 project on Indian Curculionidae and also for comparing the alcidodid material with the identified collection in British Museum of Natural History, London and various other European museums.

I am thankful to Professor H. S. Vasishth, the former Chairman, and Dr. S. K. Khera, Professor and Chairman, Department of Zoology, Panjab University, Chandigarh, for providing me the necessary research facilities.

The author wishes to express her thanks to the Council of Scientific and Industrial Research, and Panjab University authorities for the financial assistance in the form of research scholarship during the period of research.
I am grateful to Dr. R. T. Thompson, Principal Taxonomist, British Museum (N.E.), London, for his prompt and kind response in lending me needed Indian material. My thanks are due to Dr. P. K. Sen-Garma, Forest Entomologist and Director, Biological Research, Forest Research Institute, Dehra Dun for allowing me to consult Library and Museum and also for lending some examples. I am also thankful to Agricultural Institute, Bangalore and University of Delhi, Delhi for their kind act of lending the insect material.

I thankfully acknowledge the help rendered by Mrs. S. Ghal, Insect Taxonomist, Indian Agricultural Research Institute, New Delhi in comparing the material with the identified collection in the museum.

My son, Master Anshul Dhir, also deserves my deep appreciation for his commendable behaviour throughout this trying period to run out his patience.

I take this opportunity to extend my heart-felt thanks to my husband, Mr. S. C. Dhir, Lecturer in Zoology, G. M. N. College, Ambala Cantt, for his affectionate encouragement and kind co-operation.

I shall be failing in my duty if I do not thank Mr. B. S. Kahlon for patiently typing the manuscript.

Last but not the least I am highly thankful to all my friends and colleagues for their ever-ready help and assistance.

March 22, 1982

(Santosh Kumari)