ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Dr. K. Sham Bhat, Reader in Economics, Pondicherry University, my supervisor has many superlatives to his credit, as a teacher, researcher and guide. For all the efforts, encouragement and interest that he evinced in the completion of this dissertation, I register my life-long gratitude to him.

In the real sense, the seed for this research work was sown by Dr. M.P. John, a senior citizen of Pondicherry and the editor of 'New Times Observer', during the Vice-Chancellorship of Dr. K. Venkatasubramaniam. I am grateful to these erudite scholars, who still lead the educational community today.

It was my brother, Mr. M. Subramanian, a poor carpenter in my school days, who spent a major part of his meagre earnings on my education. He was dreaming that I should reach the highest possible peaks in education. My humble attempts still persist to make his dream come true. I take this opportunity to record my heart felt gratitude to him.

I also take this opportunity to express my profound gratitude to Dr. M. Ramadass and Dr. K. Ramachandran, leaders of the Department of Economics in Pondicherry University, their eminent faculty members and the staff attached to the department.
I express my sincere thanks to Dr. Saroja Sundararajan, Director, Kanchi Mamunivar Centre of Post Graduate Studies, Dr. K. Uma, my affectionate head of the department, Prof. D Muthukumarasamy, Prof. V. Gopalakrishnan, Dr. D. Darmalingam and Dr. S. Varalakshmi, my colleagues.

I extend my deep sense of gratitude to Dr. D. Sambandam, presently reader in Economics; Dr. Nadarajan, Registrar; Dr. Sampath, Mr. Nallathambi (Deputy Registrars); Mr. P. Muralidasan, Mr. Panch. Ramalingam, Mr. Murgan, Mr. Ramkumar and a host of my friends and well-wishers in the University.

I am highly indebted to Mr. A. Mohandas, for his uncompromising co-operation in the qualitative completion of this dissertation in a neck speed of time. I am also thankful to Dr. Nirmala Mohandas, for her scholarly suggestions and motherly care during the execution of the work.

I remember on this occasion Mrs. Anandhavalli Krishna Swamy, my life long inspiration in all my attempts to success. I am also grateful to Mrs. Chandra Subramanian, my sister-in-law, Mrs. Sarala Kirthiveeran, my sister, who are from behind supporting the completion of the work.
My personal thanks are due to Mr. T. Amirtha Ganesan for his timely assistance in all my academic activities. I am also thankful to Mrs. Rajeshwari Sham Bhat, for her smiling hospitality extended throughout the period of study.

I have pleasure in thanking my daughters R. Ilavarasi and R. Sharmila for sharing the family responsibilities and sparing me to devote my full attention to academic advancement.
