Gratitude is never a matter of right. It is not claimed. It becomes due. What is due must be acknowledged. The completion of a research work demands constant supervision and guidance in manifold ways. In this respect, I was fortunate to have the supervision of a luminary of the stature of Dr. Balram K. Gupta, Professor and Chairman, Department of Laws, Panjab University, Chandigarh, who took unfailing interest, gave constant encouragement, gracious assistance, wise and sound consultations from the stage of planning and arrangement of the schemes of the present work till the stage of its final preparation. He was most generous with his time in spite of his heavy schedules particularly in view of his administrative obligations. His comments on each chapter were in the form of fresh vistas of thought, giving clue to approach the same aspect from a different perspective. But for his scholarly and able guidance and his ever presence in the Department, the work would not have been in this shape.

I am grateful to the staff of libraries of the Department of Laws, Panjab University, Indian Law Institute, New Delhi, Panjab and Haryana High Court, Chandigarh and Haryana Institute of Public Administration, Chandigarh.
