AIMS OF THE STUDY
To investigate the effects of pregnancy on maternal malaria infection.

2. To study the pathological consequences due to malaria infection on fetal development.

3. To investigate the effects of prior immunization of animals on the course and sequelae of malaria infection during pregnancy.

4. To study humoral and cellular immune responses in pregnant, infected animals and their association on the course and pathological consequences on fetal development.