10 Joelle Diderich of Reuters, Pris, reported that after Dan Brown’s bestselling novel 'The Da Vinci Code' was published, visitors clutching dog-eared copies of the book have poured into the Louvre and the church of Saint Sulpice to witness the real places and the real paintings which the author mentioned in his book. This follow-your-imagination trip inspired by the book creates new business for the Harvard-educated art historian who launched her “Cracking the Da Vinci Code at the Louvre” tour which caters to more than 100 tours a month mainly to North Americans.
