ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

One of the pleasant experiences during the course of study was the opportunity to meet and work with my Research Supervisor Dr. M. SUREESH BAABU, Professor, Department of Management Studies, S.V. University, Tirupati. He has been realistic in his expectations, fair with his constructive criticism and a great source of information and support over the course of the study. His able guidance and scholarly touch ensured the successful completion of this research work. He guided me with great sense of commitment and spared no effort to make the thesis as systematic as possible.

I am grateful to Dr. SRINIVASALU REDDY, Professor and Head, Department of Management Studies and other professors of the Department of Management Studies of S.V. University, Tirupathi, for the immense help and support and for their encouragement and suggestions which helped me a lot in completing this thesis successfully.

I express my sincere thanks to Dr. VENKATARAMA RAJU, Professor and Head, Department of Commerce, Pachaiyappa's College, Chennai, who have been most helpful in supporting my efforts throughout the research work.

My thanks are also due to Dr. K.G. JAYAPRAKASH, Associate Professor, Centre for Theoretical Science Development, Chennai – 113 and Dr. R. RAVANAN, Reader, Department of Statistics, Presidency College, Chennai, who has been extremely helpful in answering any of the statistical data questions and offering helpful suggestions and Dr. S.S. KUMAR, Retired Professor of English, Presidency College, Chennai for improving the language of the thesis.

I take this opportunity to thank Dr. G. VIJAYA KUMAR, Assistant Professor, Department of Commerce, Thayagaraja College, Chennai. He has been a very good source of support, inspiration and motivation to complete the research successfully and quickly.

My sincere thanks are due to my parents Mr. S. GOVINDAN and Mrs. G. KAMACHI AMMAL who have been a source of inspiration to me in all my endeavors.

I also thank my wife Mrs. B. SARALA for her moral support and help in completing this research.

Last but not least, I am grateful to all my colleagues, friends and all my well wishers who have actively assisted me in my work.
