ACKNOWLEDGMENT

It is not easy to pinpoint your sense of gratitude to a few persons only who are directly involved with this work at hand but innumerably many persons and situations even remotely connected in various degrees in the accomplishment of this job also deserve my silent but profound gratitude at this hour of deliverance.

Somehow I stumbled upon this problem five years back and since then I have been thrown into an unknown world without a compass at my hand to chart out my course amidst roadblocks. This has the advantage, of course, of doing things slowly but surely with a deep sense of satisfaction. It is needless to mention that my thesis supervisors Prof. Kampal Mishra and Prof. S. K. Kamilla provided me not only with valuable academic inputs but also enduring moral support during the course of the work. I lavish an encomium on them. My HOD Prof. P. C. Dash has always encouraged me to walk that extra mile. I am deeply grateful to him. Prof. V. Ramarao M is my friend, philosopher and guide. No word of thanks for him as he is already assured of a special position in my heart for his yeoman service in teaching me the finer details of research. Ms. Outi Wulff of DESY, Germany for her selfless and ceaseless efforts in providing me the relevant research articles/papers at the shortest of notice. Prof. Ajoy Ghatak, Prof. Vasudevan Lakshminarayanan, Prof. Charles Chubb and Dr. Brian Vohnsen deserve my deep sense of gratitude for truly working as remarkable mentors. Prof. R. N. P. Choudhury deserves my gratitude for his selfless support. My colleagues at the department of physics deserve my special thanks. My younger brother, Jatadhari deserves admiration of a special kind for his untiring efforts in giving final shape to all computational works. My father has been asking me for years together to indulge in research. And finally he will be a happy man. My mother loves me whether I am a doctorate or not. But my wife, Sangita will be happy with my professional work. My sons, Bodhisattwa and Dhiman will probably feel proud that their father is at last a Ph. D holder. Thank you.

Nachieketa K Sharma

Date: Regd. no. 1161023015