ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The research project embarked upon was of the species that without delay becomes the cynosure of all eyes, evoking untrained evaluations everywhere. By its very nature it is risky, hazardous and undoubtedly laborious when undertaken individually for a time-bound period (although the epithets hold true for a group also). The heights of perfection that are visible in such ventures pose arduous tasks that are often insurmountable.

Scaling such heights was not quite the aim as some stability was being sought in just the first few steps in scale construction. It is towards this end that contributions were made by several individuals.

Dr. Vineda N. Murthy, Professor and Head of the Department of Clinical Psychology, M.N.I.M.A.S, guided the project spent many precious hours in providing thoughtful advice, critical evaluation and encouragement. Her flexible ways combined with a judicious approach made working with her a memorable period of academic training. The sense of freedom and heavy responsibility that was inculcated by her contributed much towards growth. Having taken over the task of guidance in midstream due to changes effected in the department, she rose admirably to the occasion to render all help that was possible.

For the inspiration, insightful thinking and ingenuity so characteristic of the maestros whose intellectual resources are overflowing, I shall always be grateful to Dr. N.N. Murthy. His constant encouragement and support proved vital to the engineering of a project that was initiated by him. I shall always remember his thoughts on the phenomena of aggression which were so germane to the task at hand.

I am grateful to Dr. A.N. Varma, Director, NIMHANS who had shown keen interest in the area of aggression and facilitated the objectives of the research. I also wish to thank the Institute for partially financing the project.

Special thanks are due to the specialists in the area of behavioral sciences who participated actively in the construction of the scale. Their prompt and sincere cooperation is appreciated.

I am greatly obliged to the staff and students of the University and its affiliated colleges, the Indian Institute of Management, the Indian Institute of Science and the National Institute of Mental Health & Neurosciences. I am also grateful for the sincere cooperation shown by the staff of the Marketing and Consulting Agencies, Bangalore, for providing the data that constituted the normal sample.

I wish to express immense gratitude to the Psychiatrists and residents at NIMHANS, Victoria Hospital and the Air Force Hospital, Bangalore for referring cases that constituted the clinical sample of the study. At the same time I express equal gratitude to the patients who cooperated when requested.

Many many thanks I owe to the innumerable researchers in the field of aggression especially L. Berkowitz, D. Oluven, C.E. Climent, R. Plutchik, M. Rejin and coworkers and S.B.G. Fysensk for their timely response to requests for off prints and test material.

I am very grateful for some special advice on statistical analysis received at the All India Institute of Medical Sciences, New Delhi and to Mr. V.G. Kalispermal, Assistant Professor and Mr. D.K. Subbakrishna, Lecturer in the Department of Biostatistics, NIMHANS. Above all my heartfelt thanks to Dr. Sadanandan, Director and Mr. V.G. Nair, Consultant (DSC-10) of the Computer Center, Tata Institute of Fundamental Research, Bombay, without their sincerity, sense of commitment towards research and a very helpful attitude no progress was possible. I am equally grateful to Mr. K. Krishna Mohan of Electronic Technology Company, Computer Centre, Bangalore, for all his perseverance and care in computerising further data.

The ready help provided by Mr. M. Iswara Bhat, Senior Librarian, NIMHANS in procuring necessary information is greatly appreciated.

I also wish to extend my sincere appreciation and thanks to all my friends for their kind consideration and to some who helped in so many special ways.

Finally, I wish to thank in ways too many to express my parents whose motto "courage wins all" kept up the sails of a ship till it found anchor.
