I sincerely appreciate the unreserved support provided by Dr. Achala Umapathy, Professor, Department of Psychology and Dr. Ashok, Lecturer, Department of Psychology, Bangalore University, in times of my need.

I thank Bangalore University for giving me an opportunity to work in their department and make the study possible.

My thanks are due to all the Principals and Teachers of Various schools and Parents who offered me their kind assistance and support in the collection of my data, and the children who were subjects for this study have my thanks coming their way too.

I thank all the librarians of the various Libraries for giving me permission to use their libraries and to collect required materials, without which the work would not have been possible.
I owe a lot to my parents and my family members for having encouraged and stood behind me through all my years of research. One cannot formally thank them—only be aware of their unconditional presence.

I would like to thank my Aunt and Uncle (Latha & Dick) for their support, help and guidance without which this study would not have been possible.

With my hostel mates and scores of other friends who have shared my troubles, lightened my load and helped in times of my need, confusion, uncertainty and occasional depression through their unconditional support.
