ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

I am deeply indebted to Dr. Namas Chandra Mehrotra, Reader and Head of the Department of Linguistics, Ravishankar University, Raipur, under whose patronage, inspiration and kind supervision, I was able to complete the present work.

I am highly thankful to Dr. Bh. Krishnamurthi, Professor and Head of the Department of Linguistics, Osmania University, Hyderabad, who was kind enough to advise me from time to time on certain matters connected with this work.

During the First All India Conference of Linguists held at Poona in December, 1970, I had an opportunity to discuss certain problems of Gondi with Dr. P.S. Subrahmanyan, Reader, Centre of Advanced Study in Linguistics, Annamalai University, Annamalainagar. I am grateful to him for his comments and suggestions. His book 'A Descriptive Grammar of Gondi' has also been quite useful to me.

I am obliged to Dr. H.S. Ananthanarayana, Reader, Department of Linguistics, Osmania University, Hyderabad, for his suggestions in this work.

I am also thankful to Dr. T.B. Naik, Professor and Head of the Department of Anthropology, Ravishankar University, Raipur, for his encouragement and to Shri Saroj Nath Bajpai of the same Department for his commendable co-operation in the completion of this task.

I should also thank Dr. G.P. Shrivastava, Lecturer in Linguistics, Ravishankar University, Raipur, who was at times helpful in the present work.
I am very grateful to the Government of Madhya Pradesh in Tribal and Harijan Welfare Department, who were kind enough to permit me to get my name registered for the Degree of Ph.D. in Linguistics (On Gondi).

I am thankful to Shri F. Bahadur, Director, Tribal Research and Development Institute, Madhya Pradesh, Bhopal, for his kind inspiration in the completion of the present assignment.

I express my deep sense of regards and thanks to all the informants, who were so generous and co-operative during the collection of the data. Their particulars are given in the chapter of Introduction.

I am thankful to the manager of 'Agrawal Typing Spot' of Raipur, Madhya Pradesh, who completed the laborious work of typing the present thesis in a very limited period.

Last but not least, I owe a sense of gratitude and extend my sincere thanks to the authors (especially C.F. Moss, C.G.Trench, Russell and Hiralal, and Grierson) for their works, which I have read and quoted in the context.

DATE : 12-8-1971

(PANDURANG ACHAR)