I feel very much honoured to mention here several names that are associated with this dissertation. Dr. D. R. Sharma, my teacher and supervisor, comes first: he readily endorsed my view when I submitted my synopsis on Bennett's realism. For his constructive criticism and invaluable suggestions to prepare and assemble the format, and subsequently, for all his unstinted help, any words of appreciation will be insufficient. His unceasing goodwill, encouragement and inspiration from the beginning are my happy recollections which outweigh words of gratitude.

I remember Professor R. N. Seth, my teacher, for the numerous suggestions and complimentary opinions on Bennett. He has shown his unsparing kindness and fatherly affection to sustain me in hours of distress.

I am extremely grateful to my friend, Dr. Pandey S. K. Sharma, for numerous kindnesses and for assuming a large number of responsibilities in taking unceasing pains to procure books from various libraries, making available photostat copies and other materials necessary for this study.

I would like to thank Dr. M. L. Raina, Chairman, Dept. of English for his helpfulness and advice.

I am most especially indebted to my aged parents for their remarkable hope, their prayers and untiring patience.

My particular thanks are due to the British Council Library, USIS Library, New Delhi and American Studies Research Centre, Hyderabad, for their helpfulness during the gathering of material for my dissertation.
