ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

At the very outset, let me express my gratitude to Almighty God for having guided me through the rigours of this intellectual pursuit.

No effort can fructify without the help and support of well wishers.

I would like to place on record the unstinting support of my Supervisor, Rev. Fr. Dr. M. SEBASTIAN, S.J., whose painstaking efforts and meticulous guidance has enabled me to complete this work. It has been a joy for me to learn from him the logic and art of pursuing empirical research.

This dissertation could not have been completed without the generous cooperation of academics and bank officials. I wish to thank Prof. K.J. CHARLES, Centre for Research in Economic and Social Development, Madras, for his scholarly insights and valuable comments rendered at every stage of this work.

Thanks are due to Dr. V. RENGARAJAN, Economist, Indian Overseas Bank, Central office, Madras, and Mr. T.S. YESHWANTH, Retired General Manager, NABARD, Madras, for their personal involvement during the preparation and conduct of the field investigation.

I am also indebted to the Branch Managers and Staff of the Indian Bank and Indian Overseas Bank for their willingness to furnish all the data and to have assisted me in identifying the institutional borrowers who had defaulted in their repayments.

A special word of thanks to the Officers of the Lead Bank Department, Indian Overseas Bank, Central Office, Madras, for having granted me access to State level records on banking in Tamil Nadu.
My gratitude goes to Dr. J.D. Von Pischke, Senior Consultant, World Bank, Washington D.C. and Dr. Jayanti Lal Jain, General Manager, Indian Bank, Madras, for the intellectual stimulus and encouragement given to me to undertake this study.

I am grateful to Mrs. Ivory Syiem, Librarian, CreNIEO, Madras and also the Librarians of National Institute of Bank Management, Pune and Reserve Bank of India, Staff Training College, Madras, for permitting me to use their library and providing all assistance.

My sincere thanks to Mr. R. Dharumaperumal, Programme Assistant, Madras Institute of Development Studies, for the excellent data processing and analysis work done by him.

For the secretarial support, I am indebted to Mr. P. Krishnan of Loyola College, Madras, for his consistent and efficient work, and to the obliging staff of J.J. Lasers for the finalisation of the dissertation.

I acknowledge the sincere concern shown by Dr. K. Rajaratnam, Director, CreNIEO, Madras, for giving me the opportunity to further my academic interests in his Institute and Mrs. Premanjali Rao, Administrative Officer, CreNIEO, for her ever willing help.

To Dr. A.G. Leonard, S.J., Head, Department of Economics, Loyola College, Madras and other colleagues in the department, I am extremely grateful for their unfailing support.

Very special appreciation for the role that my wife and daughters have played in shaping this work.

Finally, I dedicate this work to my parents who instilled in me the virtues of honesty, discipline and hard work.

May 1996

Jacob Kurien