Rectal temperatures of the experimental animals were recorded in °F as it is the widely used system for recording human and animal temperature in clinical practice.